—Bald heads are too many when they may be covered with a luxuriant growth of hair by using the best of all restorers, Hall's Hair Restorer.
—After the restoration of faded and gray hair to its original color and freshness, Ayer's Hair Vigor remains unequalled. This is the most popular and valuable toilet preparation in the world; all who use it are perfectly satisfied that it is the best.
—Dr. Mackerman, Esq., was in town Monday night until about 11 o'clock when he was returning to his boarding place across the creek, by the bridge by the light of his lantern he saw some one with hat pulled over his face jump behind one of the large trees. Dr. Mackerman thinking some one was wanting the handsome sum of money that was known to be on his person, retraced the steps with a jump and a jump and stayed in town that night.
—A beautiful young lady became so badly disfigured with pimples and blotches that it was feared she could die of grief. A friend recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which she took, and was completely cured. She is now one of the fairest of the fair.

—NOTICE.—Having been collected by a goodly number of my old customers to resume the tanning business I have consented to do so, hoping all concerned may be benefited.

—A beautiful young lady became so badly disfigured with pimples and blotches that it was feared she could die of grief. A friend recommended Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which she took, and was completely cured. She is now one of the fairest of the fair.

Maritime Movements.
During the recent tide, several rafts moved off for Ronceverte. There was also quite a run of logs with the Driscoll brand. It is believed hereabouts, that the missing Knapp, is yet among the living, not taking the rap that knows no waking as many suppose. Owing to the parties unexpected absence to bath, on special ministerial service, there will be no preaching at Marlins Bottom church next Sabbath, Feb. 16th. The appointment will be carried on to the 3rd Sabbath of March.

Traveler's Repose Locals.
We have a good prayer meeting at the church, near here every Wednesday night. All the young converts that professed at Brother Ballenger's meeting appear to take a great interest in the meeting. May the good work go on.
B. M. Yeager, is having a large lot of cherry logs hauled together near here, which he will have sawed this spring.
J. L. Arbogast, who fell on an ax and split his knee cap on the 15th day of last December 1st, improving slowly. He can walk a little by the help of one crutch.
I notice that the writer from Brush Run forgot to say, when Professor Steinmayer started home with his best girl. He can only stand part of the long walk up the mountain. He also forgot to say the prospects are bright for a wedding at Mr. J. W. Wiley's in the near future.
The snow is about two inches deep at this writing. We have had but little snow this winter, and no ice. Sleight and skates appear to be useless property this winter.
Preston Tracy, who has been working at the lumber camp at Winchester, had the misfortune to have his leg mashed to pieces below the knee, by a log jumping off the slide.
E. B. Kerr, has completed a sheep stable, which will stable three hundred sheep. For architecture and convenience, this stable beats anything we have ever seen.
Abner Gillispie will soon close his fifth term of school at the Hoover village home.

W. E. Grover has built a large house on his farm and will move into it soon.
Another violent attack of La Grippe made its appearance on Brush Run in a most singular form. It is to be feared that a relapse will dislocate on F. H. Hainaker's neck.
Mrs. Grady Kennedy who lives near Prof. Hainaker's school house has also had a few attacks of "grippe".
Writing THE TIMES tonight, I am—
JENNIE GROSS.

Railroad Accident.
A terrible accident occurred on the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad near the big Pennsylvania tunnel between Hinton and Lowell in this state. The switch had been left open, and a freight train, dashing along at a pretty fast rate, shot out of the track and into the signal station, which was built near the track and on the bank of the New River. The little house was torn from the foundation and, with the telegraph operator carried into the river. The locomotive and tender also went over. The operator, engineer and fireman were drowned.

PRETTY IS AS PRETTY DOES.

Oh, here's to the miss
With the chocolate-drop kiss,
Whose cheeks are like peaches and cream,
Whose smile is like fine
And whose eyes are divine
As the fairies I see in my dream.
She saucers her ma
And "talks back" to her pa,
And novels her hours employ,
She's pretty to see,
But please excuse me—
I would dare not marry the toy.

And here's to the girl—
A plain featured pearl—
Who scatters wherever she goes
Such kind words and deeds
As every heart needs—
Like perfume is sown by the rose.
Her hands she employs
In bringing fresh joys
To the souls that are burdened with strife,
If naught shall prevent
And win her consent
Some time I shall call her my wife.

LOST IN A MINE.

They were talking about the recent mining disaster at San Leandro that brought the conversation around to mining accidents generally, and finally one of the party recalled the Comstock terror of two years ago, when a cave in the Gould & Curry buried nine men alive.

"I had a pretty ugly experience in the mines myself eight years ago," said one of the party, "an ex-Nevadan.

"I was a boy of 14 or 15 then, with about as little sense of prudence as most boys of that age, and I had a chum about as old, who was as careless as myself.

"We lived to the north end of Virginia City, and had a big back yard in which we always planned our expeditions. One day, in poking around that big yard I found near an old shed a big iron ring. This was fastened to a heavy plank cover that hid the mouth of an old shaft. This cover was hid by a couple of inches of dirt.

"When the first big excitement struck the Comstock everybody went to digging, and now the whole side of Mt. Davidson is as full of abandoned shafts as a Swiss cheese is of holes. Within the town limits all the abandoned shafts are filled up or covered so as to keep befuddled pedestrians out of them. The mine we discovered in the corner of the yard had been too extensively worked to allow of its being filled up, and therefore had been covered up as described.

"We didn't lose much time in prying up that cover and beginning the exploration of what we found. The shaft was evidently an upraise from some drift of the lower mines, for it went down at an angle of about 45. As soon as we had descended 50 feet we saw that the workings had been very extensive indeed, for drifts and winzes went off from the main shaft in every direction. We went into several of these but always found ourselves stopped by a cave, for the workings were very old. Some shovels and picks that we discovered were almost gone with rust, and the timbers where they stood were bent and crushed and rotten. By guarded inquiries we found that it was in the ground of the Opbit Mining Company, and a drift had probably once extended to this place in an attempt to strike a ledge to the

"Finally the idea took possession of us to go from our mine into some of the working ones and come up that way.

"The Andes shaft was only a few hundred yards from our mine, and we knew they must be connected. We knew enough about the mines to take what we thought were sufficient precautions against getting lost. The grain of the rock showed us the directions as surely as a compass, so we were not at all apprehensive. We thought that we might be down for several hours, however, and so took along a number of extra candles and some lunch. Thus fixed we began to clamber down the old shaft. A hundred feet below the surface we found some more drifts, and spent an hour or so in them. But all were either blocked with caves or else stopped in the solid porphyry. So we had to go on slambering down the incline.

"Ben was ahead, and I saw him stop, and then he shouted back to me:

"This is the bottom."

"He stood clear of the walls and lifted up his candle to examine the place.

"This is the bottom," he repeated.

"Are you sure?" I called back.

"Yes; I—"

"I saw his candle disappear amid a crash. He called to me that it was all right, and to come down, and I cautiously followed, though I could not see his light anywhere. Soon I found out what was the matter. The miners had built a platform across the shaft, probably to prevent things from rolling down and my companion's weight had broken through the planks that had been placed in position so long before. He had only slid a few yards down the incline, and, bearing a few scratches, was unhurt. A very little way below the old platform we struck the 200 foot level of the mine, and started off to explore the in nels. After following a crooked old tunnel we came to a point where it forked.

"We entered the left hand tunnel, but found that it extended less than 20 yards. When we came to a standstill against the wall of rock Ben put his candle close to the wall to observe the grain of the porphyry. He made an exclamation of surprise. By the grain of the rock we had been traveling almost north, when we thought we were making good progress to the south. When or how we had got 'turned around' we could not tell, but there was no possibility of doubt about it.

"We lost no time in retracing our steps, but to our surprise when we came to the crooked tunnel again we saw the mouths of three drifts instead of two. We took the tunnel that led to the right and were gratified to find that it turned to the south after a few yards. It ended in an incline something like the one by which we had entered the mine. Down this went Ben, while I waited above, so as to be able to direct him back with my voice. Soon I heard him calling to me and I followed.

"Look here," said Ben, putting his candle close to a clammy timber.

"I looked and saw a chalk mark.

"We've gone round in a circle somehow," said Ben. "There is the wheelbarrow you fell over. We had better follow our marks back and try it again some other time."

fore, did you?" said my companion, as we passed half a dozen rusty picks that must have been lying there a decade, at least.

"I hadn't noticed them either, and soon we bumped our heads against an old lantern hanging from the top of the drift. We hadn't met that before. Then we saw more unfamiliar things, and we noticed that there was water beside the old car track, while the drifts by which we had come were all dry as a bone.

"We looked at one another and evidently the same thought passed through both our minds, but we kept on and soon our fears were realized. The tunnel ended in what had been, years before, a cooling station, a place where the miners ate their lunch and rested and cooled off when they were working in the neighboring drifts. We had followed some one else's chalk marks, and we had no idea of our whereabouts.

"We can't get out the way we came," said Ben, "and no work is done in the upper levels, so what we've got to do is to get down as far as we can, and we're bound to run across some miners." Then we began trying to find ourselves. We took the deepest tunnel and followed it until we came to a shaft with ladders in it. These ladders were crumbling and had evidently not been used for years, but we were not heavy and they did not break. Down we climbed to another level. This we followed as before.

Whenever we came to a shaft we threw a fragment of rock down to ascertain how deep it was. Then we would climb down as far as we could. We had just reached one level when a rushing sound broke the stillness. The noise startled us for an instant, but hurrying ahead we saw hundreds of rats coming out of a small tunnel at the mouth of which stood a monstrous old ore car.

"This cheered us, for we decided that men must frequent some place near there, or the rats, which in the mines live on the remains of the miners' lunches, could get nothing to eat. But though we hunted until we had to stop and cry again, we could find no one. Down an incline we went and struck a tunnel that had evidently been used more lately than the others. As we turned into it we saw a spark away off. Soon we saw that it was a candle carried by a miner. We let out a shout, but to our amazement and horror the miner dropped his candle and ran as if forty devils were chasing him. We hurried after him and picked up his candle, but he must have turned into some other drift, for we could not find him, and our weary search again became as hopeless as before. We had by this time been in the mine a good many hours and had cried ourselves sick. No matter which way we turned, there was the same dead cold walls of rock. The passages were endless, they seemed to lead nowhere. We passed several old cooling stations and at last we got to one and stopped. We were utterly exhausted, and with all our misery choking us we swallowed some of our lunch, blew out our candles and, holding each other's hands, fell asleep.

"I remember that my last thought before I became unconscious was that a long time after Nothing about this struck me as being funny. Indeed, I fell asleep crying. We must have slept a good many hours, and my next recollection is of our lying there together, sobbing, in the dense darkness. Suddenly I became conscious of a low, continued roar as of water running a long way off. My companion heard it and we listened, dully wondering what it could be. We finally lit a candle, ate the last of our lunch and started to find out. We had both been down the mine frequently before and had no fear of the darkness or the rats, so we went without hesitation. It was not hard to follow the noise. Along tunnels, down short uprises and up inclines we went until we struck our corridor. We followed on toward the noise. It was louder here, and as we advanced it grew into a perfect roar that filled the tunnel.

"Soon we ran into a wall of wood from behind which the noise came. We peered through a chink in the plank partition and saw a broad moving line. It was the cable that holds the cage, and that is what made the noise.

We watched through the chink in the boards until we saw a cage loaded with rocks go up and then began to think how we could reach the point from which the cage had started. We knew that we were very far under ground, for the rocks that we threw down the frequent shafts splashed in the water at the bottom. It was not long before we found a deep shaft, and down that we clambered. As we neared the bottom we heard another rattling—oh, our our running along the tramway. We shouted as we went down the ladders and the corners staggered our cry. Soon we were standing by him while he looked at over with wonder.

"Where are we?" we both shouted, as soon as we could speak.

"This is the 1500 foot level of the Crown Point," he answered.

"We had gone a mile and a half under the ground and nearly a third of a mile down. We were sick and benumbed and hungry and our clothes were torn almost off of us. It was ten o'clock in the morning when we entered the old incline, and it was nearly 4 o'clock the next morning when the corner found us. In no time at all we had been fed and sent in charge of a miner on the cage to daylight again."

First Burglar—"Pard, the jig is up. No breaking into that bank to night." Second Burglar—"What's the matter? Are the detectives on to us?" First Burglar—"No, I saw the president and cashier buying tickets for Montreal this morning."

Women is an enigma. She will face a frowning world and cling to the man she loves through the most bitter season of trial and adversity, but she wouldn't wait a hat three weeks behind the style to save the Government.

Poor, Foolish Men.

TAKE A WOMAN'S ADVICE.

This is only the second time in the history of the world that a woman has been so foolish as to take a man's advice. The first time was when she was a child and was told to take her father's advice. The second time was when she was a woman and was told to take her husband's advice. The third time was when she was a mother and was told to take her son's advice. The fourth time was when she was a daughter and was told to take her father's advice. The fifth time was when she was a wife and was told to take her husband's advice. The sixth time was when she was a mother and was told to take her son's advice. The seventh time was when she was a daughter and was told to take her father's advice. The eighth time was when she was a wife and was told to take her husband's advice. The ninth time was when she was a mother and was told to take her son's advice. The tenth time was when she was a daughter and was told to take her father's advice. The eleventh time was when she was a wife and was told to take her husband's advice. The twelfth time was when she was a mother and was told to take her son's advice. The thirteenth time was when she was a daughter and was told to take her father's advice. The fourteenth time was when she was a wife and was told to take her husband's advice. The fifteenth time was when she was a mother and was told to take her son's advice. The sixteenth time was when she was a daughter and was told to take her father's advice. The seventeenth time was when she was a wife and was told to take her husband's advice. STATE SENATOR.

This is Pocahontas' turn to finish State Senator and our correspondent POCAHONTAS mentions in another column the name of Attorney C. F. Moore as the suitable man to lead the Democrats to victory in the coming election, which we most heartily endorse.

The republicans, next year, will make a greater effort than ever before to get control of the Legislature, and what we want and must have, is a man who will be a sore winner and who can be thoroughly relied on when elected, and we know of no other man who will more fully meet all the requirements than the above mentioned gentle man.

Floods.

Last year the Eastern States suffered most severely from the heavy floods, the far Western States having escaped almost entirely.

In 1890 the reverse promises to be the case. The heavy snows laid the foundation for over-swollen water courses, and the copious warm rains of the past week have set the water to running in great volumes.

Reports of disasters have begun to arrive from different parts of Oregon, California, Washington, Colorado and elsewhere, and the danger ahead seems to be the greatest ever known from such a source since the settlement of that section. Many cities and towns are cut off by the water from all communication with the outside world, and immense loss of property and some loss of life is feared.

It is to be hoped that the fears so freely expressed are exaggerated, and that later news from the flooded country will be of a more cheerful cast.

A rumor comes up from Charleston that Judge Snyder, of the Supreme Court of Appeals, will soon tender his resignation. It is to be hoped that the rumor is without foundation as he is about the ablest jurist on the Supreme Bench. The reason assigned is that the work is too heavy for him. Judge Snyder is now serving his second term. In the event of his resignation we know of no man we would rather see as his successor than Judge Homer A. Holt, of Lewisburg—Mountain Herald.

The Bessemer Machine Works now employ 1,000 men. The payroll last month amounted to over $55,000.

Mary L. C. Ross, was shot and killed in Staunton, a few days ago by Annie B. Grimble, and Percy Strother as accessories; all colored, and of a low character.

The date for the unveiling of the Lee monument at Richmond has been changed from the 15th to the 20th of May next, to suit the convenience of several distinguished gentlemen whose presence is considered important.

A great suit, arising out of Louisiana Lottery stock, and involving $2,000,000 has been begun against John A. Morris, owner of Morris Park. He will be defended by ex-President Cleveland.

Frank P. Blavin has declined the California A. C. offer of a prize for him and Ann McMillan to say for. He says he does not wish to run members of the House, have humbly obeyed their masters orders and the new Rules have been adopted by the House. The democrats made many protests against being robbed of their rights but their arguments did not cause a single republican to vote against the edict of the boss—nobody supposed they would. Now that the bars are down and that Congress practically consists of Speaker Reed and the Senate there is great rejoicing among that thrifty class of people who thrive on extravagant government appropriations, and if one may judge from the number of schemes now before Congress calling for large amounts of money which seem to have the endorsement of leading republicans, they have reason for rejoicing. If only one-fourth of the money asked for should be voted by Congress, the Treasury would be empty. The country may safely count on the democrats of the House to keep it posted on what is going on if they cannot check the proposed extravagance.

Senator Blair spoke four days on his educational bill this week. The opponents of this measure in the Senate have been working very quietly to defeat it, and now they are confidently claiming that a majority of the Senators are pledged to vote against it. In spite of this claim the general impression is that the bill will pass.

Col. Lamont, who was formerly Mr. Cleveland's private secretary, was in Washington this week for part of a day. He said his visit was a business one, but lots of people thought there might have been just a little politics mixed up with the business.

The democratic congressional campaign committee, is practically complete, and further announcement as to its organization is not likely to be made until it is definitely known whether Senator Gorham will accept the chairmanship of the committee, which is now being urged upon him by the party leaders.

The hearings in the Ohio bill on box forgeries investigation, which were used by Ohio republicans to get even with each other on old scores, have been closed, all witnesses discharged and the committee adjourned subject to the call of its chairman. The last hearing was highly sensational. Foraker called Governor a liar, and Wood stated that the forged document was prepared by Foraker, Hadlen and himself. Wood has been detected in a good many lies, but there are lots of folks who believe he was pretty near the truth in this last statement.

How's this for paternal government? Bills have been introduced by republicans in both Houses to prohibit any changes being made in the boundaries of any Congressional district until after Congress shall have made the apportionment of Representatives on the return of the census to be taken this year. If Congress, or a majority thereof, can make such a law there is no limit to what it may not do.

Representative Grimes, of Georgia, left a Washington hotel because a negro was seated at the same table with him. Public opinion here says Mr. Grimes did right.

Representative Blount's bill authorizing the Postmaster General to erect post office buildings in all towns where the gross receipts exceed $3,000 a year is warmly approved by Mr. Wamsutter.

Senator Mandy has introduced a postal telegraph system, embracing those cities having the free delivery system, to be established at once. He made a long argument in its favor before the House committee on Post offices this week. He believes it would be a great convenience and that it would be self sustaining.

Ex Representative Symes, of Colorado, is here opposing Secretary Windom's silver bill. The House committee in charge of the bill has invited Mr. Windom to appear before it and submit his views.

Another big republican editor has been provided for by the administration. Charles Emory Smith, editor of the Philadelphia Press goes to Russia as minister.

The Presidential proclamation opening the Sioux reservations in South Dakota to settlement, was sent out from the White House Monday afternoon.

The anti administration republican Senators did not make much of a showing when it came to a vote on the confirmation of Mr. Morgan, the Commissioner of Indian affairs. Only two of them voted against the confirmation.

The democratic leaders in the House are now patiently waiting to ascertain just what programme the republicans propose adopting now that they have everything their own way in that body.

Don't Go West, Young Man—So Fast
The unmarried women of Massachusetts are said to have $20,000,000 on deposit in the saving banks of the State.

Mrs. Harrison thinks the proper time for a girl to marry is when she is 25 years of age, but the general opinion is that a maiden should marry when she gets a good chance.

A man who has practiced medicine for 40 years, ought to know what he is saying: read what he says.

Tulsa, Ok., Jan. 19, 1890.
Messrs. F. J. Cheffy & Co., Gentlemen: I have been in the general practice of medicine for most of my life, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with such confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by you. I have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure if they would take it according to directions.

Several drummers were in town lately.

Post office inspector was in town last week.

Several new subscribers late by.

Drummers are plentiful now—a sign that spring is approaching.

The merry song of the frog is again heard in our distant swamps.

County Court the first Tuesday in March.

We had quite a thunder storm Tuesday night.

The postoffice in the Hotel by Wagner is being moved to the little building opposite the Post Office.

B. M. Young, Esq., of Traveler's Report was in to see us last week.

Gay Slaven, Esq., of this place started this morning (Wednesday) for Vine Creek, Kansas.

Valentine day is over, and we didn't get one, but we don't feel at all slighted.

Col. D. A. Fisher, has the foundation dug for a new dwelling house on the lot he bought, adjoining Attorney H. S. Rucker's.

We will commence the erection of a new printing office pretty soon, which will add to the appearance of our little town.

J. C. Lorry, Jr., has been quite sick for the past several days, but we are glad to say, is a good deal better now.

Thank to Dr. Larue, of Ansonia, for three years' subscription to THE TIMES; one year back pay and two years in advance.

If we had one thousand more subscribers like the six hundred we have we wouldn't trade places with any other county paper in the State.

A new fence, we think, would greatly improve the appearance of the court house square; it wouldn't cost very much and we venture to suggest that it be done.

Miss Gertrude Galt, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Jacob Buser at this place for some time started this morning (Wednesday) for her home in Baltimore.

Capt. J. C. Lakin and Mr. Levi Gay brought down a hunter ruff from Marlinton last Thursday evening. It contained about 25,000 feet of ash.—Huntsville News.

Hall's Hair Renewer is free from alcohol and dyes that injure the skin. It is scientifically prepared, and will restore gray hair to its original color and vigor.

Every lover of beautiful flowers should send 10 cents to James Vick, Rochester, N. Y. and get his Floral Guide for 1890. We have one, and it is the completest thing of the kind out. Flowers are earth's ornamentation from God's own hand, and the influence which they breathe is of divine or god.

I have used Ayer's Pills for the past 20 years, and am satisfied I should not be alive today if it had not been for them. They cured me of dyspepsia when all other remedies failed.—T. P. Sumner, Chester, Pa. Ayer's Pills are sold by all druggists.

We hear from the Monroe Watchman, that the large frame dwelling house of Mr. Daniel Heyme in Palen was entirely destroyed by fire on the 7th inst., with a loss of furniture, loss about $1,400, partially covered by insurance.

The world wide reputation of Ayer's Sarsaparilla in the natural result of its surpassing value as a blood medicine. Nothing in the whole pharmacopoeia affords more astonishing results, in scrofula, rheumatism, general debility, and all forms of blood disease, than this remedy.

Last week one of our merchants put a little three dollar ad. in THE TIMES. The next day we happened to stop in his store and seeing him very busy, and a crowded store, we asked one of his customers, "What did you come here to buy your goods?" and his answer was "We seen his advertisement in THE TIMES." The merchant informed us that evening that he had sold one hundred dollars worth of goods. Now, counting 25 per cent. profit, which of course all merchants ought to have on their goods) and three dollars for the ad. would leave him a clear gain of twenty-two dollars for the day's work, to say nothing of the good it will do him hereafter. Now, let us ask you does advertising pay?

The Next State Senator.

If the Democrats of this Senatorial District follow the custom heretofore established of selecting their candidate in rotation from each of the counties composing the district, the county last represented in the Senate, being entitled to the candidate; Pocahontas time to furnish the candidate has arrived and we see no reason why our County should not have the next Senator. We have kept up our democratic majority, as well, if not better than any county in the Senatorial District. We have a large and growing county and our people deserve the same encouragement at the hands of the Democratic Party, for their fidelity, that has been extended to the other counties of the District, we have among us several available candidates, that would do honor to the District, but from among them all, we suggest the name of C. F. Moore, of Huntersville as the one best equipped in every respect to lead the Democrats to victory in this District. A gentleman, affable in his manner, popular with the people, successful in his profession, ready in debate, well informed on the issues of the day and withal a sterling democrat, and we think no better or older man could be selected, as our standard bearer in the coming contest.

Southard's Creek News.

I have not seen anything from this week of the woods for some time—I will give you a line or two.

Lettrips made its way into our neighborhood in a mild form. The steamers will send A. W. Rider's in full blast.

Gen. Baxter, Esq., is doing some surveying on Laurel creek, for the St. Lawrence Co. Chas. E. Steiner is also working in behalf of the same company.

James, Will Gibson, of Frost and E. F. White of this creek, were in Greenbrier Co., last week, and brought back with them some fine cattle they purchased there.

Rev. W. T. Price, was the guest of Mr. Henry White, one night last week.

The Lonely Dale school, taught by Miss Belle Sharp has closed.

A. E. Kincaid is stopping around with his head up as to how he is going to get married soon, and if you ask him about it, he changes the conversation he will tell you of a wonderful corn scrape he got in to it, which he caught one week and let one run away.

Brega Bank News.

Mr. Jas. H. Curry, Mr. has been seriously ill for the past fortnight with La Grippe. His physicians think he is somewhat improved, but owing to his extreme old age, his friends are very anxious about him. The epidemic is prevailing to such an extent that there are but a few families who have not been afflicted with it.

A little child of Mr. J. V. Little has been dangerously ill for the past few days.

Mrs. Ida Brown, who had been spending a few weeks visiting friends at Winchester returned home last week.

Miss Della Sharp, who has been suffering from La Grippe, has so far recovered as to be able to take charge of her school again.

The people of this neighborhood, are making good use of the sugar weather.

Arch Asbury, has moved off the Amoss property, and is now living on the property of George W. Rodgers.

We understand that a Post Office Inspector has been visiting the Post Masters on this route. It is supposed that the government sent out this man, upon the suggestion of Mr. H. S. Rucker, to see if he could find sufficient cause for the removal of some of the Democratic Post Masters.

All those who have not received a Valentine this month should send their address, at once to the Valentine clique, at Marlinton, W. Va.

There is a great deal of sickness in this vicinity.

Mr. John Staley is very low with the mumps.

Mrs. Arctus Arbogast has been very sick with mumps, but we are glad to say she is now recovered.

Prof. Jas. Varner who had the misfortune to get his arm dislocated at our school house is better at this writing.

"Jesse lives" the writer from Traveler's Report hopes to write, that when Professor Jasper Varner starts with his best girl, he never gets further than Mrs. Susan Staley's.

Sending and receiving valentines seems to be the order of the day.

Mr. Frank Phillips guest our most influential farmers' contemplation starting to the west in their car.

We think it is a little hard to tell when he was on top of the benches making fun of the kind people of Brushy Run, who were looking at him during the speaking rendered by Rev. Hannah and Arbogast he would have broke his neck.

Madam Buser has it that Prof. Jas. Varner will soon capture the bell of our burg.

We have a good prayer meeting every Thursday night, at our school house, conducted by Mr. Arctus Arbogast.

Mr. Jas. Varner paid Mr. James Groves a flying visit last Sunday.

Rev. Arbogast will preach at our school house the third Sunday of this month at eleven o'clock.

ZACHARIAS THORP.

Demerss Disease.

Still the gripe prevails with some.

Quite an angle difficulty occurred between Earl Nottingham and Tom Patterson at Glade Hill school house, on Saturday the 24th inst., in which Nottingham stabbed Kelly and twisted in the stomach, one cut 2 inches long and the other 4 inches long and deep. With good care Patterson will recover. Nottingham took his snook. The difficulty originated about a dog.

The engine on the lumber H. R. turned over and threw Capt. Smith out of the window. No one was hurt.

The lumber drive started Saturday and got as far as Cherry Creek Monday and hung up.

Col. Dan O'Connell is about half done, sliding his logs at this writing.

streeker had another big auction sale at Kilray.

Dick Knapp has not been found yet, and a good deal of excitement prevails in the neighborhood of Ed ray.

We notice that there are some talk of a wedding near Brushy school house, and the Prof. will take a half dozen girls with him when he leaves—if he don't he wants to.

We notice quite a lot of plowing has been done, over the county where we have been. That is right—farmers ought to put out more crops this year than before. Politics has but little to do with growing crops, and that is the only salvation for the people, since stock has gone to nothing. Pocahontas Co., ought to raise a hundred thousand bushels of oats this year.

Heather Ballouge preached his last sermon at Dumore on the 18th for the conference year.

We notice that a part of the new road near the river below Dumore has given away. The overseer should fix it up.

We expect to have the road built from Dumore to this summer and bridge across Greenbrier river at Dumore of John L. Sullivan and with a great degree of pleasure the remarkably close looking the re-arrangement is doing in his theatrical engagements. They say he seems bright and active on his feet as ever. Even "sports" who do not like to follow praise the good form. Keeps himself in. He isn't drinking either.

BOWSER RUNS THE KITCHEN.

At the supper table the other evening, when Mr. Bowser complained of the biscuit and tea, and called attention to the general look of dissipation which the table presented, I felt called upon to reply:

"Well, as you know, I have been feeling very miserable for three or four days and this house girl seems to be the poorest one that I ever had. She has no order or system, no taste or skill, and I won't keep her a minute after I can get around."

"If this is her style I'll go out and discharge her."

"Wait. If she was to go now you'd have to cook your own meals."

"That wouldn't hurt me any. I'll go out and ask her what she means by such conduct, anyhow."

"But I wish you wouldn't. She may flare up and leave us in the lurch."

"Let her flare! When the time comes that we can't boss our own house we'll leave it!"

"Mr. Bowser, please let the girl alone for me to deal with," I interposed.

"I'll just speak a few words to her you know," he replied, and as I went into the sitting room he went into the kitchen.

In about two minutes I heard a crash of crockery and the bang of a door, followed by the sound of the girl's feet on the back stairs, and five minutes later she came down with her bundle and skipped out without a word to me! Mr. Bowser came in soon after that, coat off, leaves rolled up, and a roller towel tied around him, and he explained:

"I simply asked her if she thought this house was a saw mill, and she called me a monster and flew for her bundle. Is she a fair specimen of the help you have had to deal with?"

"Yes."

"Well, you and all the other home keepers have my deepest sympathy. I used to think it was your fault that so many girls came and went but I want to apologize and take it all back."

"But, what shall we do?"

"No! Why, I'll run the kitchen until after breakfast and then get a girl."

After he had been at work for a few minutes I crawled out to see how things were going. He was washing dishes. He had the tea pot, butter dish, napkin rings, two pie tins and the crockery all heaped together in a dish pan, and while he was washing them with a dish towel he was wiping them on one of baby's old skirts taken from the hamper in the stairway. There were streaks of dish water clear to his heels and a dozen new spots had appeared on floor cloth, but he insisted that I go back and leave him alone, and when I refused to give him any instructions to give. He just went on doing up in half an hour when he came in to sit down.

Nothing out there is as slick as I, and breakfast is all planned. That girl would have been hanging around until 10 o'clock when she had her dishes done, I'd be in your place a month, I'm some of 'em wonder why you ever born?"

"Every house has just such a fellow."

"You women ought to be run by men."

If I don't get you the best breakfast you have seen in a year I'll give up that I don't know nothing about a house."

About midnight I heard him muttering in his sleep:

"Take two eggs—salad—five minutes—greased rag—one table-spoonful to each person."

It usually takes me all of twenty minutes to get Mr. Bowser out of bed in the morning, and the task is never accomplished without resort to fiction as to the lateness of the hour. On this particular morning he slipped out before I was awake and he had been working in the kitchen a full hour before I got down. No man can be made to believe that there is a right and a wrong way to sheets or table cloths. Mr. Bowser had set the table just as any other man would. The cloth was wrong-side-out, the teaspoons in the celery dish, the sugar-bowl running over, and the meat platters and bread plates had changed duties. Some of his slices of bread were two inches thick, and some almost as thin as paper, and two of them bore indispensible proofs that he had cut his finger while cutting his bread.

He requested me to sit down while he brought in the meal. He had his cut finger in a rag, black on his nose, flour on his hair, and his face had the color peculiar to red paint. He also went lame in his left leg, caused, as I afterwards ascertained, by the rolling pin falling on his foot. Where he had everything on the table, he looked around him with a self-satisfied air and proceeded to do the honors. Poor Mr. Bowser! He had put the steak into a spiler without butter or grease, and it was as black as coal and rather more tasteless. When he poured the coffee the grounds insisted on filling half the cup, and the eggs he had fried in some rancid lard the girl had set away could not be approached nearer than two feet. He had attempted to bake some potatoes, but they were hardly warmed through. In his goodness of heart he had toasted me a piece of bread, and when it fell into the ashes he had wiped off as much foreign substance as he could with the brush-broom used about the stove. I tried hard to keep my face straight, but my feelings finally got away with me, and Mr. Bowser looked up with an injured air and said:

"You never cooked a better meal in all your life—you got any of your relations for a thousand years back?"

Just then I saw that he had used a pie tin for the butter dish, and I had to laugh again.

"Look here, Mrs. Bowser," he shouted, as he bobbed up and almost overturned the table, "this thing has gone too far—too far! I see now where the trouble lies. I see now why no girl will stay with you."

"But this last one was willing to stay."

"Yes, and what did you do? Do graded her in her own estimation until self respect obliged her to quit."

"You went out and blew her up."

"I did! I went out and blew! And who asked me to do it?"

"No one."

"That settles it, Mrs. Bowser—settles it right here and now! It's the last meal I'll ever cook for you."

"I asked you to let the girl alone."

"You did! Never! You begged of me to go out and throw her over the alley fence, and her bundle after her, and what most that poor girl's feelings be at this moment! I now go. I may return or I may not. If not you have the consolation of knowing what drove me from my own domicile."

But he returned. All husbands return. They begin to feel ashamed of themselves before they are clear of the gate, and the next hour is spent in fishing for an excuse to return a quarter of an hour earlier than usual. A girl happened along just after he left, and I hired her, and he hadn't even referred to the subject since.

Altogether, too Fast.

As the train left Dayton, north bound, the conductor came into the smoking car with a cry of, "Tickets, please!" and as there was only one fresh passenger he walked directly up to him. This new arrival was from the farm, and is nothing of a hurry.

"What's up, Kernal?" he asked as the conductor halted before him.

"Ticket, sir?"

"Yes, is she on time?"

"Yes."

"Going right to Cincinnati?"

"Yes, ticket, if you please."

"I had a ticket, but—how's wheat looking along the line?"

"Give me your ticket."

"Wonder where I put it? Here somewhere between here and Hamilton this month? Feller was telling me yesterday that he'd never—"

"I am in a hurry, sir!" exclaimed the conductor.

"Shoot! Haven't got any hay out at the other end of the line, have you? I got caught once last week, and me'n Bill had to work like like mules to beat a thunder storm."

"Have you got a ticket?"

"Of course."

"Then hand it over, at once! I can't fool away my time here!"

"Shoot! Well, here's the ticket, and I want a receipt for it. Feller in such a hurry as you might die suddenly. Lends! but what a hired man you would make for a week or two! Never had one who was in a hurry. Say, if you—"

But the conductor was gone, the countymen turned to a passenger with a look of disgust on his face, and continued:

"That's the way with these monopolies. They not only want all your money, but they won't treat you decent after they get it. Reck on I'll drop in on the boss of the road when I get to town and let him know that such conduct don't go down with a free-born American."

He (somewhat suspiciously)—You say you never loved anybody but me? Hal—is that true, Mand?

Willie was basical, and sat on the chair with a care which was far from being any suggestion of studied grace. His mother had found him in the pantry with his fingers strongly suggestive of intimate acquaintance with jam and marmalade.

"What is the matter Willie," asked his sister, who happened into the room.

"Mamma spanked me," he said, plaintively.

"What for?"

"For—for fishing in her presence."

Mr. Billings (looking over his expense account)—Maria we spent exactly $50 more than our line-one last year. We've got to retrench.

Mrs. Billings—It wasn't my fault, John. I didn't lose $75 on the election, nor pay out $40 in club dues, nor spend $65 for cigars, nor run through with $120 in three days at the races, nor indulge a son for $200 for a mere acquaintance and lose it, nor—"

Mr. Billings (still looking through the expense account)—None of these things account for that $50. My Jove! Here it is! "Subscription to pastor's salary. $50!" Maria we can't stand that! The preacher will have to get along without anything from me this year.

"But," she said to the newsboy who had opened the door of the shop to yell "Papers!"—boy, you cheat a shrewdly, and I don't buy some more papers of you."

"What did I do?"

"You sells me a paper last night, and I took him home and hunt all over and don't find dot message."

"What message?"

"Dot message to der President."

"Why, the President don't have a message but once a year. It came out long ago."

"Is dot so? He come out and I don't see him. Und he don't come no more?"

"Not for a good while yet."

J. B. Kelley, arrested in St. Louis as a much wanted Crown criminal, turns out to be nothing worse than a book agent, and the detectives are duly crestfallen.

The New York Herald paid the widow of Russell Wright $24,511 damages for libel, said to be the largest amount ever paid in America for libel, and the largest in the world except that paid by the London Times to Mr. Farnell.

The Indiana Prohibitionists have nominated a full State ticket, and declared in favor of the exemption from taxation of clothes and other necessities of life. Tobacco comes under the head of such necessities in Indiana.

As a log rolling in Wayne County, on the 20th inst., Wade Thompson, a notorious desperado, was struck and killed with a club by one Sam Pratt. The quarrel was over some trivial matter. Pratt was arrested, but escaped. Thompson was one of the murderers of Alonzo McCoy, during the Hatfield-McCoy troubles.

Wm. Miller, tried at Lexington, Va., last week for the killing of Dr. J. Z. Walker, at Brownsburg, Va., last November, has been acquitted. The verdict gives the most universal satisfaction, and it is met with approval on every hand. When the case had been disposed of the Commonwealth moved to take up the other cases, and the Court decided to set them for the April term. The counsel for the defense asked for bail in the cases of George and David Miller and John Reese. The Attorney for the Commonwealth raising no objection, these prisoners were bailed at $1,500 each to appear at the April term, and they were set free under bonds.

George Wilcox, who recently died in West Franklin, Pa., lived and died in the Democratic faith. His will, just filed in the Bradford County court, is a somewhat remarkable document. He left a stated sum to his grandsons on condition that they support the Democratic ticket, State and national. His granddaughters, in order to inherit any of the old man's wealth must either marry Democrats or remain single. Should any one fail to comply with the provisions of the will their amount shall be divided among those who remain faithful. In the event of all failing to listen to the requests then their interest in the estate is forfeited, and the entire amount goes to the Democratic National Committee. There is not much danger that the boys will ever be anything but Democrats.

weight-challenged Kilrain. John Jacob Aster died in New York on the 22nd inst., of heart failure. He was one of America's richest men.

In the Southern Athletic Club in New Orleans on the 17th inst., Corbett bested Kilrain in six rounds. Kilrain agreed to knock Corbett out in six rounds for a purse of $3,500, of which $2,500 was to go to the winner. Corbett outbought Kilrain at every point. Cleary whipped Mike Smith in two rounds. Beanie beat Johnson in four rounds.

Kilrain says he is not satisfied with tonight's contest, as all in fighting was barred. Corbett having the longest reach naturally could tip and get away. He would like to box him with five ounce gloves. He will fight in a club for a suitable purse to a finish, winner to take all.

A Quintuple wedding took place a few days ago at a little church in Daviess County, Ky. All the parties were friends, two of them being sisters. They had intended getting married on dates near together, and the priest hearing this, suggested that they all be united at the one time. The five brides, all dressed alike, went in one carriage and the five grooms in another. There were ushers, but no bridesmaids. All took their stations before the altar, and after an unusually long and impressive ceremony had been gone through with nuptial high mass was celebrated and the kneeling couples blessed. A grand reception was then given the young couples, and afterwards they went to their respective homes.

Wayside Note.

It was your correspondent's pleasure to visit portions of Bath and Highland about Valentine time.

Such beautiful days in winter no one remembers ever seeing even the chief inhabitants.

Some time was spent in the hospitable home of Col. D. V. Rockman. This enterprising and public-spirited gentleman is greatly pleased with his success in raising Japanese Buckwheat. He sowed between four and five bushels, last cropping time and realized over three hundred bushels.

Capt. Gilmore his neighbor sowed seven pecks, and gathered one hundred bushels. He believes had it not been for the turkeys, there would have been fifteen or twenty bushels more.

These gentlemen feed Buckwheat to their sheep and hogs, and their stock thrive well on it, mixed with oats it is an excellent feed for horses.

For table use it is as good if not better than the common variety. Those of your readers, that have not tried it, would do well to make further inquiries about this remarkable cereal, the Japanese Buckwheat.

ED. TIMES: In your last issue under a head of "Buckeye News," one Lucian says: "It is supposed that the government sent out this man upon the suggestion of Mr. H. B. Rucker, to see if he could find sufficient cause for the removal of some of the Democratic Post Masters," referring to the visit of a Post Office Inspector to this County. Now Mr. Lucian either contributes to your columns the suppositions of a very ignorant club, such as does not exist at Buckeye, or he has no regard for that injunction which says: "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." I have never undertaken to remove any Post Master in this County, but have aided in sustaining one or two and actually they were Democrats. The mode of having removals, is by applying for the application continued to the Representative in Congress or elect. I am persuaded that Mr. Lucian knows more of the real object of the Post Office Inspector's visit than he has divulged to the public. Perhaps Mr. Lucian would like to know whether or not he had impressed the P. O. I. so that he would report to the department all rights at Buckeye. Perhaps Mr. Lucian was about the Buckeye Post Office about the time when he had no right to be, and perhaps his conscience makes him feel uneasy about the result of the visit of said P. O. I. If I wish Mr. Lucian removed I will have no trouble in procuring it.

Just the Chance he Wanted.

"Talk about being broke," said he, "reminds me of a time when I was very badly broke, so much so, indeed, that I was in debt. I owed everybody, and, although I had told all of my creditors exactly how I was fixed and promised them I would make good as soon as I got money, they seemed determined that I should not rest a moment in peace. As I said before, I didn't have anything, and of course as the old saying goes, they could not get blood out of a stone.

"One of my creditors, a big fat, stumpy shoemaker, was particularly obnoxious, for he was at my house presenting his bill three and four times a day, and often the same number of times during an evening.

"He made me tired, and I puzzled my brain for a scheme to get rid of him.

"You know if a man waits, and is looking for an opportunity, the opportunity will often come, and so my chance to get even with him came at last.

"I knew that he was a coward at heart, and I resolved to make him so afraid that he would run out of my house and never come in again. This morning that I referred to he came as usual and presented his bill. I was busy in a room I had fixed up as a sort of 'den,' as it were, and the landlady says him in there to find me.

"Well, sir, what is it?" I asked, as he came in.

"I have come for the amount of my bill," he replied.

"And for the nine hundred and twenty-eight times," said I calmly. "I shall be obliged to tell you that I haven't the necessary funds to liquidate that bill."

"Very well, sir," he answered. "Then I shall be obliged to inform you that I shall sit down here and wait until the bill is paid."

"Very good," said I quietly; but, to tell you the truth, I was highly elated, for here was just the opportunity I had been looking for.

"He sat down and placed his hat on the table. When he had done this I called to the landlady and said: "Mrs. Robinson, I am at home to nobody to day and do not want to be disturbed under any circumstances. You may come in to-morrow morning and mail what letters you see here on my writing desk." Then I closed and locked the door, and stripping up some billiard cloth I had, stuffed it into every crack, leaving no place where air could get into the room or out. Then I drew up a long legged looking document, which I labeled "My will," which I took good care that the shoemaker should see, and after writing a few notes I went to the chandelier and turned on all four burners. All the while previous to this the big shoemaker had no doubt thought that I was shuffling him, but when I turned on the gas I could see that he was beginning the room and then sat down calmly and waited for him to weaken. The gas was escaping rapidly and the room was fast becoming filled with it. I could feel my head swim, but I would not give in. All of a sudden he jumped up and cried: "I did not come here to be murdered," and, making a rush, jumped through the window, taking sash and all with him. It was about 30 feet from the ground, but when he landed he started off as if a mad bull were after him, and I never saw him or his bill, for—I can't help it if you don't believe me. It's the truth, and if you come up here to-morrow I'll show you the way himself, and you can ask him if it isn't so."

Smith is a joker and not long ago when a man threatened to knock him all to pieces, he remarked:

"I beg your pardon; you mean all to Smithereens."

When you can climb through a barbed wire fence in good shape with your overcoat on, you may then hope to run for office without being held up before the world as a second-rate.

Mrs. Figg—Isn't there any way to get rid of that young Jinx who keeps calling on Clara without positively insulting him?

Mr. Figg—Why, certainly. Just give him the baby to hold the next time he comes.

Miss Sadie Pulltrigge (roughly)—Colonel, I'm afraid you have an awful lazy horse. He stops at every large tree he comes to.

Col. Whiffshaw (of rattlesnake panache)—He ain't lazy; that's just a habit he's got into. Miss Pulltrigge. I rode that horse to five different lynchings last week. No wonder he stops when he comes to a tree!

"Pardon me, madam," said the attention-looking man in the sixth row of seats as he leaned forward at the full of the curtain on the first act and spoke politely to the lady sitting in front of him, "but I beg you will not remove your hat."

"Sir," she exclaimed, flushing with indignation.

"I fainted from the motion of your hands," he resumed with the utmost anxiety, "that you were about to remove it. Please do not. Oblige me, my dear madam, by keeping it on."

"You are grossly impertinent," said the lady, sharply.

"I beg your pardon, madam," he replied, with great earnestness. "I am only a poor inventor, and I am making a drawing of your hat as a design for a World's Fair tower."

"Your time has come," said a physician, speaking to an old Georgian, who lay stretched out on a bed.

"Air you shore, doc?"

"Yes."

"Ain't no chance for you to be wrong, is that?"

"None whatever. You'll be dead by sundown."

"Shore 'nuff, now?"

"Yes, I tell you."

"Now, you ain't trying ter get off a joke on me, air you?"

"No, I never joke a dying man."

"Well, then, I reckon I'm gone; but I wish I'd knowed it a week ago."

"Think you would have been better prepared?"

"Yap; a heap better."

"It's not too late to pray, if that will do you any good."

"I don't keer nuthin' about that; but if I'd a knowed last week what I know now, why I wouldn'ta bought that rump horse. I'd a took the money and had some fun with it. Coudler had a rattlin' time on that $40. Coudler bought hiker enough to send a hog in. That's the way with this here world. A

Indigestion

It is not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Broadway Centre, Mich.:

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

The Last Reward.

Pittsburgh is a town of a hundred real estate just now, and the competition for choice lots runs high.

Mr. Bilge owned a lot on the corner of Fifth avenue and Madison a week or two ago, but he does not own it now. This is how he happened to part with it:

Two men walked into his office one afternoon and one of them said:

"I believe."

"I believe?"

"I believe in you, and I want to sell you a lot."

"What lot?"

"A lot on the corner of Fifth and Madison, what will you take for it?"

"I don't know," but I am anxious to sell that lot," said Bilge; "will I might, if I could see what it is worth."

"Well, it is worth $100,000."

"That property is worth every cent of $100,000, and I don't know but what I ought to ask $150,000. Do you want to buy?"

"Yes, I want to buy."

"Well, I will sell you the lot for $100,000, but you must take it in three months."

"I will take it in three months," said Bilge.

"Well, I will sell you the lot for $100,000, but you must take it in three months."

All women are in league against the bachelor who doesn't marry. With this league against him, offensive and defensive, the unmarried man may find peace in heaven, but he can never hope to find happiness on earth—this side of marriage. However, once married, all the bachelor's troubles are over. He is no longer the subject of interest or derision, a "bachelor" except the attention which is procured from love.

From the bachelor becomes on his marriage, to use an object of commiseration to the knowing ones, an object of comparative indifference to all women but one; but the success of the bachelor is not due to his wife, and his added dignity and completeness as a man and citizen make him wonder how he previously existed as one-half of a pair of social partners without the other half.

As last, perfect husband.

He was tall, unshaven and independent and handsome from his hair. He had just leased some oil land down in the field, and was "signing" the papers in the city. The real estate office yesterday afternoon.

"What's your wife's name?" inquired the clerk who was filling out the instrument.

"Harbison," he replied.

"Harbison what?"

"Harbison M."

"What does the M. stand for?"

"Well, married, I know."

"What? Don't know what the M. stands for?"

"Nope."

"Why, man, how long have you been married?"

"Been married 14 years and don't know your wife's middle name."

"Well, why didn't you ever ask her?"

"I never asked her, and she never told me."

"Well, I will sell you the lot for $100,000, but you must take it in three months."

"I will take it in three months," said Bilge.

How He Paid His Lawyer's Fee

"My first case in San Francisco," said Attorney James K. Wilkie, "was the defense of a man, a man who had with stealing a watch belonging to a Catholic priest. I was appointed by the court, because the prisoner said he had no money."

"The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and as the defendant was leaving the court room I called him back and said to him: 'You have won your case, but you have lost your money around the first $100 he got.'"

"Next day he walked into my office and thanked me for two things and a lot."

"Where did you get all that money?" I demanded, as soon as I got over my surprise enough to speak. "He told me the priest's watch," he replied, as he bowed himself out."

WASHINGTON LETTER

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 27.

Senator Sherman's alleged anti-trust bill which his republican colleague, Senator Platt, says is a sham and a delusion and nothing less than a humbugging of the people, has been overloaded with amendments by the Senate. Of course everybody here knows that this bill, if it was a law, would not hurt a single trust. Mr. Sherman himself has admitted that the bill is only intended as a warning to the trust, and he might have added, that it would also if passed prevent the passage of any other measure that might be introduced with the intention to really injure the trusts. Perhaps that is what it is really intended for. Congress can break up every trust existing in this country inside of ninety days whenever it pleases to do so. All that is necessary is to remove the tariff from the article dealt in by the several trusts.

Senator Chandler is one of that class of republicans who believe that this Government exists for their special benefit. Having recently put a man, who was his private secretary, into the Navy department as chief clerk of the bureau, he now has the cheek to introduce a bill to increase that chief clerk's salary from $1,800 to $2,500 a year.

The House passed the Chicago World's Fair bill with amendments providing that women should be represented upon the board of managers and that the fair should be held from April to October 1893. There is no doubt of the early passage of the bill by the Senate. Circumstances have overcome what ever serious opposition there existed in that body.

The republicans of the Senate have struck a streak of industry and agreed to meet daily at 11 o'clock instead of 12. They have also decided in caucus that the Montana steel bill be called up on Monday and remain before the Senate until the theft is consummated, to be followed in regular order by the dependent pension bill, the administrative customs bill, the land for future bill, the Jones silver bill, and the bills for the admission of new States. An attempt was made at this caucus to limit the Senators to support a Federal election bill, but it failed most ignominiously. It is only by the aid of king caucus that a Federal Election bill can be carried in either House or Senate.

The House committee on Territories has practically finished the application of New Mexico and Arizona to become States, at the present session, by deciding to postpone further consideration of bills for their admission.

There is also Gen. Crook's bill for a pension of $5,000 a year, which has been introduced in House and Senate.

The House has also passed a bill for the admission of New Mexico and Arizona to become States, at the present session, by deciding to postpone further consideration of bills for their admission.

announcement of the items in their bill. Already they have decided that hides and raw silk shall go back upon the free list, and the sugar people are demanding with a prospect of success that the cut on sugar shall not exceed 25 per cent. It is impossible to say how soon the bill will get before the House. It has not yet been discussed by the full committee.

The president and secretary of the Virginia Republican League, at this city, have been arrested under the civil service law prohibiting of campaign contributions from Government employees. It was done with the intention of making these test cases. In order to get a judicial construction of the law.

The Civil Service Commission, not satisfied with the largely increased appropriation it had already asked for, has submitted a supplementary estimate to Congress asking for $37,000 more.

Secretary Proctor wants the Pension bureau transferred from the Interior to the War department. He says the work could be done there cheaper.

The republican members of the House committee on Elections must have had some pretty severe twinges of conscience of late. This week they have decided two contested election cases in favor of the sitting democrats.

General Hankin has occupied the floor of the Senate for the greater part of the present week. No legislative body on earth is farther from the people than the Senate of the United States, but that does not prevent the liberal use of platitudes about the "dear people."

The House has passed the bill for the admission of Wyoming Territory as a State.

Secretary Windom's silver bill has been favorably reported to the House, but it has been radically amended.

The Pan American Congress has reported in favor of the adoption of an International silver coin.

Queen Victoria, on the Dover boat, bound for Aix les Bains, was in great good humor, with her three coachmen, nine grooms, eight horses, one donkey, three carriages, 72 trunks, three special beds, a special cooking stove, wine, two doctors, one surgeon, one surgeon for the Princess Beatrice, three ladies-in-waiting, nine women servants, one lord, two equerries, seven dogs and Prince Henry of Battenberg, whom she introduced as "Heber Heinrich," in voice loud enough to be distinctly heard and distinctly convey the impression that he is once more restored to the love of his royal mother.

Come see the place where Jesus lay;

The cavern dim is empty now.
Come, sons, the angels' word obey,
One earnest look your heart avail

Come see the place where Jesus lay,
When all that love could do was o'er;

His life blood shed, the sinless dead,
Lay here upon earth's stony floor.
Come see the place where Jesus lay.

O seekers of the Crucified!
Like Mary, as ye turn away
The longing wish is satisfied.

J. H. Arbogast, Adm'r,
vs.
J. H. Arbogast's Heirs &c.

I will sell at public auction to the highest bidder in front of the Court house door in Pocahontas County, W. Va., on MONDAY, 7TH DAY OF APRIL, 1890, all the lands yet belonging to the Estate of Jacob H. Arbogast, dec'd., comprised of a tract of 45 acres; part of a tract of 123 acres and part of a tract of 50 acres, all adjoining each other, and containing in the aggregate about 577 acres, lying in the forks of Greenbrier River on the S. & P. Turnpike, about 65 acres of these lands are in cultivation, with a good dwelling and other buildings and orchard &c. The balance affords a good outlet for young stock, especially sheep, and has some good Hemlock, Spruce and Oak timber upon it.

TERMS OF SALE:

10 per cent. of the purchase money cash in hand, the balance in equal payments, falling due in 9, 18 and 27 months from day of sale, with interest from that day. The purchaser to execute bonds with good security for the deferred payments, a lien will be retained until a future order of the Court.

HOME NEWS.

—Circuit Court next week.

—Read Jacob Boner's new ad.

—Every body come in to see us when you come to court.

—A few trials before Justice Grose lately.

—Announcements for office must be paid in advance.

—More new subscribers this week, and still room for plenty more.

—The deepest snow of the season fell Monday.

—Have you a supply of eggs for Easter?—if not you had better be a hustling, it's only three days off.

—Attorney L. M. McClintic, who has been on the sick list for several days, is improving.

—Died, Mr. Peter Sharp, of Frost, on last Saturday morning, aged about 60 years.

—George Wagner, Esq., has been sick for the past few days, but not seriously.

—Joe McNeel, Esq., and wife, of Academy, were visiting her parents Saturday and Sunday.

—There was more real winter weather in March than the rest of the winter.

—Jas. W. Warwick, Esq., has returned from a several days' trip in Va.

—The itching of the scalp, falling of the hair resulting in baldness, are often caused by dandruff, which may be cured by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

—If your cough keeps you awake and restless by night, take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and obtain immediate relief. This remedy allays inflammation, heals the pulmonary organs, induces sleep and restores health. The sooner you begin the better.

—"When the spring-time comes," we usually find ourselves drowsy and exhausted, owing to the impure and sluggish state of the blood. To remedy this trouble, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the most powerful yet safe and economical, blood-purifier in existence.

—We received a letter from Mr. H. A. Yeager, of Green Bank, in regard to the communication in last week's TIMES about the losing and finding of his saddle pockets, in which he says he had satisfactory explanation from the parties, and he believes there were no criminal intent in connecting them.

—In the town will be found the monument of S. I. Brown Esq., late clerk of the County and Circuit courts. Mr. Brown has been a citizen of our town for several years, and was known to be thoroughly competent, and we believe of his monument will be the object of the town's interest, and a monument to his memory will be erected at his expense.

—J. H. Moore, Esq., of Academy, and a son, are in the town, and are engaged in the business of a general store, and are well known to the community. They are in the town, and are engaged in the business of a general store, and are well known to the community.

—One Nathan Green, who is quite friendly with the inside of our jail, was arrested last Friday, and after a hearing before Justice Grose, was locked up to await the action of the grand jury for breaking into the meat house of Mr. Andrew Dillay and stealing several pieces of bacon. William Wantless was also arrested as accessory and gave bond in the sum of $500 to answer indictment.

—Martin Muden, Esq., of the Blackhannon Marble and Granite Works, of Blackhannon, W. Va., will call on the people of this county in the near future with prices on Monuments and Head Stones, that will be so much lower on the best grades of Marble and Granite than you are accustomed to, that it will be greatly to your interests to see him. They warrant all work first-class in every respect. Mar. 13-4t.

—L. J. Pyles, Esq., whose wife and child were up at Green Bank, last week, and he, having cause to believe, as he says, that she was preparing to leave him and start for Dak., where her brother is, swore out a warrant and had her arrested and brought to this place for trial for the recovery of the child, and finding that a justice had no jurisdiction over the case, he stole the child out of the hotel, and skipped over the bill; his wife seeing him started in pursuit, but failed to catch him. The next day he came back to town, and meeting, they reconsidered their solemn promise at the marriage altar "for better or for worse &c.," and went to their home.

A TERRIBLE DISASTER.

Two Hundred People Killed in Louisville.

Shortly after 12 o'clock a. m., on the 28th inst., tornado swept over Louisville, Ky., wrecking two or three hundred houses and killing two hundred people. The wind came from the southwest. Union depot, at the foot of 7th street, was lifted from its foundation and turned over into the raging torrent of the Ohio river.

A train of cars making up for the Louisville Southern road went over with the building.

Falls City Hall, west of market street was wrecked. In the hall were over one hundred people, and but few of them escaped alive. Many buildings after falling caught fire and the inmates were burned. All streets were blockaded with debris of falling buildings or telegraph and electric wires.

The Misalop Pig

Mr. Enoch W. Jordan, a prominent farmer of Lee County, tells the following snake story: He was walking over his plantation when he came to a sow which had a fine litter of pigs. He found one of them absent. Going a short distance further he overtook a huge rattlesnake which he promptly dispatched. He noticed that it seemed very large and was apparently gorged. Cutting it open, out jumped the pig, which, as soon as released from its close quarters, took to its heels and ran home.—Atlanta Constitution.

Advice to Mothers.

Mrs. Wm. W. Smith's Castoria should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer from pain, it produces natural, quiet sleep, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

BESSIE IN THE BLIZZARD.

BY KATE M. CLARK.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Bessie, "how dreary it all looks!"

And indeed the view seen from the window of the big, white Western farm house was anything but cheerful. Bare, brown, treeless prairie all around a sullen, wintry sky overhead, and not a living creature in sight, except a distant speck of sunset down in the "draw"—Baby Willie at play.

Indoors it was pleasant enough. Beside was a brisk and tiny little housekeeper. When, immediately after dinner, her father had brought round the team and he and her mother had driven off to town to do their regular weekly shopping, or "trading," as they called it, Bessie had bustled about at wonderful rate. She had washed the dishes, and put them in a shining row on the pine dresser; she had swept the room, she had polished the stove, and brought in water, and straightened the rocker cushions; she had set "sponge for the bread that was to be worked at night, and baked early in the morning; she had shaken the gay strip of rag carpet, and dusted the clock shelf, and ranged the chairs by the wall with mathematical precision. Then she had washed her face and hands in the bright tin pan kept for that purpose on a backless chair near the door and brushed and braided her soft brown hair. She took off her apron, blue checked gingham, put on one of snowy muslin, hung a clean roller towel on the rack, and put a kettle of water on the fire. Then she had taken up her one dear story book, and sat down to read.

It was a tremendously attractive book to the girl who had been brought up in the tannery and mill, and on a flash she flung a heavy so much of her mother's over her people, and unlatched the kitchen door. The furious wind tore it from her hold, and dashed it there against the wall. Vainly she strove to close it behind her, but snow was driving in, swirling fullness the floor. She loosened the thatched door. The wind dashed ward place just after she had made many a plunge into the storm, old Bessie had lived of the prairie since she was a baby, as she had seen the elements in their Unto by moods and caprices. But she never seen or imagined any Bessie like this. From the four riers of the earth the wind had blowing. The snow had the softness one associates with w. It was a dense, enveloping, penetrable cloud, filled with parage this, my, stinging, sharp as need. The cold was intense. F. J. feet ten feet away were absolute indistinguishable. Ten! Nay, they were shapes at five—at three. From the rear of the house a narrow wooden sidewalk ran down, and the baby, past the paddock, to the "draw."

What a deafening noise! Was it the clang of a coming army? Was it the beat of drums, the clamor and clash of swords, the tread of marching feet? No, not any of these. Only the creaking of the fan of the windmill, which was whirling at an astonishing rate. Only the noise of shaking windowframes. Only the clatter of milk pails piled outside the door.

Sham! Sham! Bessie sprang from the rocker. Erect she stood, dazed, bewildered, still half asleep. A shotter had been blown violently against the window. Had a storm begun while she slept? She rushed to the casement, looked out—rather, she strove to look out. Ten feet beyond the pane she could see absolutely nothing. The whole world was white, wild, whirling. "A snow-storm!" gasped Bessie. But it was no ordinary snow storm that had blown up. It was the terrific, the memorable blizzard of March 12, 1888.

Suddenly she cried out, such a quivering cry: "Baby Willie!" the part as a flash she flung a heavy so much of her mother's over her people, and unlatched the kitchen door. The furious wind tore it from her hold, and dashed it there against the wall. Vainly she strove to close it behind her, but snow was driving in, swirling fullness the floor. She loosened the thatched door. The wind dashed ward place just after she had made many a plunge into the storm, old Bessie had lived of the prairie since she was a baby, as she had seen the elements in their Unto by moods and caprices. But she never seen or imagined any Bessie like this. From the four riers of the earth the wind had blowing. The snow had the softness one associates with w. It was a dense, enveloping, penetrable cloud, filled with parage this, my, stinging, sharp as need. The cold was intense. F. J. feet ten feet away were absolute indistinguishable. Ten! Nay, they were shapes at five—at three. From the rear of the house a narrow wooden sidewalk ran down, and the baby, past the paddock, to the "draw."

And that direction fled Bessie. The shawl was torn from her head. She held it to her fingers as she ran. She would need it when she found Willie. But soon she was off the walk and floundering along through rifts and drifts of blinding snow. Where was the barn? She strained her eyes to make out the familiar structure. It was blotted out. All the old was blotted out. She could feel nothing, see nothing in her mother's room! Surely she was in her mother's bed. The brilliant that snow—nothing. Where was the paddock? She was answered patchwork quilt, she knew that. And how the bare, snow-bell by running into a barrier. She launched in the front yard were flung out her hands as the shock stove smelled lambent.

sent her reeling. Her palms were cruelly lacerated by contact with the barbed wire which formed the pasture fence. She knew now where she stood. About two yards to the left began the descent to the bluff, in the ravine of which she had last seen the child she sought. Her shawl wound itself around her body in a manner which impeded her progress as she stumbled on. She could feel she was going down the "draw," feel, for aught was useless in such a storm.

The dear little lad! If she could only find him! She imagined him crouching down, trembling, sobbing, frightened; and growing stark and helpless with cold. She tried to accelerate her speed—to rush down the incline. She tripped, fell; but she was up again in a second and battling on. Down at last. Here, in the hollow between the prairie slopes, the blizzard raged less fiercely than above.

"Willie!" she called. She could hardly hear her own voice. "Willie!" she shrieked. But the wind swept the word from her lips, and its sound was lost as a sigh. If she could only see! She put up her hand and rubbed her eyes. The lashes were wet with freezing sweat. Her hair was one stiff, matted mass. Her feet ached with the sharp, biting cold. She tried to pray. "Dear God, Baby Willie! Oh, dear God, Baby Willie!" That was all she uttered.

All at once she stumbled over something—something scarlet in the snow. Eagerly she grasped it. She dragged it up to her breast. She wrapped, as best her cold hands could, the shawl around it. Dead? Oh, no, no! She could feel the shivering pressure of the little limbs as she cuddled them to her. Oh, for strength to reach home! Or would they both freeze, and die down here, and be buried in the snow?

A heavy burden for her slight arms, for her freezing hands, the sturdy baby she carried; a burden made still heavier by his present semi-stupor. She gripped her numb fingers around him. She bent her head. Beaten, swayed, buffeted, she made her way up the hill. She reached the level. She could not go much farther. Her hold of Willie was relaxing. He was slipping from her, or so she fancied. The bitter, bitter cold! her very heart was pulsing with it. Her whole slender, unprotected body was racked with its agony.

Was that the house? Directly before her something dark had loomed up. She tottered against it. A haystack. At its base she sank exhausted. One step further would be simply a physical impossibility. Tighter she wrapped Willie in the shawl, and held him to her. Then, with her back against the haystack, her head bowed forward, her face hidden, she crouched there in torture, which drifted into drowsiness—drowsiness that was deadly as delicious!

"Willie!" This was the first word she said, endeavored to say, when the long, wretched delirium of fever was over at last. Where was she? Not on the prairie! Not in that awful white whirlwind! Not at the foot of the haystack! Surely this was her mother's room! Surely she was in her mother's bed. The brilliant that snow—nothing. Where was the paddock? She was answered patchwork quilt, she knew that. And how the bare, snow-bell by running into a barrier. She launched in the front yard were flung out her hands as the shock stove smelled lambent.

When she a person was and just behind wee, rosy, roguish of acc to P. C. "You will be the doctor said, der you lived. ous when your father found his return from town."

Just then her father came in. said very little, but he stroked tenderly the little hand on the gay calico counterpane. "And—Willie?" "He was not much the worse, thanks to you. You had him well protected. Come here, Willie."

He lifted the little chap on the bed. She smiled as she felt the clasp of the small, strong arms. "Is it—snowing—still?" The doctor laughed. "Dear child, it is May," he said. She looked bewildered. "It was an awful blizzard," the doctor went on; "the worst over known in the West. The papers were full of it. Many perished. Since the people were very brave and unselfish, and saved the lives of others. Their deeds, at least those that came to public knowledge, were praised all through the country. Yours was as grand as any. You are a heroine Bessie."

He was a young man a good-looking man. "A powerful smart doctor," averred the Western people, among whom he had elected to practice. It had taken the exercise of all his skill to save Bessie Linard's life, and now he felt correspondingly elated. "Oh no!" said Bessie very slowly and seriously. "I—thought no one could be a heroine in Nebraska."

"Gracious!" exclaimed Doctor Henderson, and he looked gravely at the wan sweet face on the pillow. "Besides," she went on, meeting his glance with that quiet, direct, convincing gaze she had, and with just a flicker of rose-bloom coming into her cheeks, "heroines do something very wonderful, and I—I only did my best!"

That was two years ago. Bessie is eighteen now, and taller, healthier and prettier than ever. She and her mother are busy sewing; for this year there is to be a wedding in the old farm-house. When it is over Bessie Linard will not be Bessie Linard any more, but Mrs. Doctor Henderson. If they were fashionable people Willie would be pressed into service as a page. But as they are not anything of the sort, he will figure in the important ceremony merely as a boy, in a new corduroy suit and a silk necktie; a boy who possesses a fond pride in his sister and a tremendous appreciation of wedding cake.

City Editor—Well, how are they coming? Now reporter—It's been an awfully dull day. WASHINGTON LETTER

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 10th.

Secretary Blaine having sent for the United States minister to Brazil has been holding long conferences with him this week in order to concoct a plausible statement, which is to be made public, to account for the slowness on the part of this Government in recognizing the Republic of Brazil. He may make any statement he pleases but the fact will remain that the recognition did not take place until the democrats in Congress had introduced a resolution to compel its being done.

The tariff bill, which after many hitches and delays was finally reported to the House late Wednesday afternoon, is not the measure it was when first made public by a good deal. The committee could not stand the pressures and were compelled to make many changes, among the most important of which were the placing of hides and sugar on the free list. To conciliate the sugar producers of this country a bounty of two cents a pound is provided for during the next fifteen years. Mr. Carlisle's minority report shows that the bill will in strong terms puncture the hypocrisy of the whole bill; an additional minority report against the sugar clause made by Mr. McKenna, a republican. The majority report practically admits that the bill is a poor one, but excuses it on the ground of the necessity for "protection." It admits also that the exact effect upon the revenues of the bill is "difficult of ascertainment," and very naively says: "It is not believed that the increase of duties upon wools and woolen goods and upon glassware will have the effect of increasing the revenues." If the report told the entire truth it should have added that this increase in duties will add materially to the expenses of every family in the United States that purchases woolen goods of any kind or glassware. Further on the report says: "This bill is framed in the interest of the people of the United States." To have been truthful it should have read: "This bill is framed in the interest of certain manufacturers at the expense of the people of the United States."

Thousands of people viewed the remains of the late Samuel Jackson Randall, as the body lay in state yesterday morning, previous to the funeral, in the Presbyterian church which he and his family have attended for years, and of which he became a member a few months ago. His colleagues of the House were anxious to have the funeral take place in the Hall of the House of Representatives, where Mr. Randall had gained his greatest triumphs, but his widow refused to allow it because her distinguished husband had requested that he be given only the funeral of a private citizen. Immediately after the funeral services the body was taken to his old home in Pennsylvania for interment. Already there is a movement started here by his old comrades of the Army of the Cumberland to erect a monument to his memory. He was a private in that army and should the statue be erected it will be the first time that a private soldier has ever been so honored. Mr. Randall lived and died a poor man, though he had opportunities to have made millions had he chosen to take advantage of his official position as secretary of our public men unfortunately have done, but he has left a heritage far more valuable than money—unimpeachable honesty, and a name that will forever shine in the pages of history among the brightest galaxy of the statesmen of his time.

The edict has gone out from Clear Head that legislation is to be railroaded through the House from this time on, in order to adjourn by the first of July, and the republicans began this week by passing the Naval appropriation bill, and the bill to reorganize the U. S. district courts and appoint seventeen new judges. So outrageous was the haste to pass the latter that the democrats refused to vote, but the Speaker counted a quorum and announced the passage of the bill. The democrats are helpless now against these usurpations, but they will appeal to the people next November.

The republicans are still wrestling with the silver problem, and a joint committee of the House and Senate is trying to form a bill that will meet the approval of a canon of their party.

The republicans of the U. S. Supreme Court have affirmed the decision of the U. S. Circuit court which released Neagle, the U. S. deputy marshal who was arrested by the California authorities last summer for killing Judge Terry. Chief Justice Fuller and Justice Lamar dissented; it was too great a stretch of Federal authority for them.

AGENTS WANTED

Huntersville, W. Va.
April 24, 1890.

There were 51,751,825 cigars made in West Virginia in 1889.

A large oak tree in the cemetery at Salona, Va., was riven by lightning last week. By splitting of the tree a silver tea pot was exposed, and on examination it was seen that it obtained the skull of a child. The date on the vessel was 1823. It was unique in make and intrinsically very valuable. Its history, however, is a mystery.

The most remarkable marriage that has ever occurred in this State for years was solemnized on the 12th inst., at St. Mary's. The groom was Samuel Shinn, aged 96 years, and the bride Mrs. Jane Patterson, aged 60. The old man, after nearly a century of single life, concluded to enjoy matrimonial happiness. In movement and speech he seemed no older than the bride, and given every indication of living many years.

The Robert E. Lee monument board, of which Governor McKinney is chairman, have resolved to invite General Jubal A. Early to preside over the meeting of the vast assemblage which is expected to gather in Richmond on the occasion of the unveiling of the Lee statue on May 29th. General Early has been the most liberal contributor to the monument fund. The orator of the occasion will be Col. Archer Anderson, of Richmond.

ONE'S HOME ESTIMATE.

The general estimate of one in the community in which he lives is a convenient average test, but it is by no means conclusive, also why the embalmers and defuncts and defuncts who have stood high, and by very virtue of public confidence have been put in position to betray and plunder?

Opinion is not infallible. Nay, it is always open to scrutiny. Men are judged by superficial tests, by manners, church attendance, good looks, polite speeches, plausible compliances. The "fine good fellow" has a well-known record. The "estimable citizen" may be found to be a fraud.

Still it would be hard to repudiate the testimony of those with whom one lives, and as a rule the standing of a man in his own community is about what it ought to be.

There will always be a few who look down at men and study their weaknesses, and remember that the community at large is the result of many. The opinion of those who look down at men and study their weaknesses is not the opinion of the community at large. The opinion of those who look down at men and study their weaknesses is not the opinion of the community at large.

It is not the opinion of the community at large that the community at large is the result of many. The opinion of those who look down at men and study their weaknesses is not the opinion of the community at large.

MY DELIVERER.

The following story was told by an old settler of the White Hills, many years ago. His name was Damon Clark, and he, and his father before him, well into a hundred years made the region north of the mountains their home.

I will give the story as near as I can remember in his own words, as he told it one evening when we sat out in front of the farm-house, with the great Presidential Range—Washington, Jefferson, Adams, Monroe and others—rising before us bathed in bright moonlight.

"I was born on this farm here," he said, by way of beginning. "The old cabin stood out yonder, where you can see those big maples. My father was one of the first to find his way up here, coming through the notch from the neighborhood of the seashore down by Portsmouth. I was about twenty-five years old, when the adventure I am about to relate, chanced to me.

"One morning, in the month of September, I told my wife that I was going into the woods for a day's hunting.

"I am afraid you will get wet before you return, Damon," she said. "Unless all signs fall, we shall have rain before night."

"A little water won't hurt me if it comes, Mandy. There ain't much that I can do if I stay at home, and I feel as though I'd like a bear-steak, or one of venison, for a change. It has been some time since I had one of your cooking. You know you can't be beat in that line. I was lucky in getting a wife who knew how to cook. One that don't, ain't fit to cumber the earth."

"There's enough of that, Damon. I'll spoil the next steak you bring in to pay you for this praise, which you know you do not mean."

"In spite of her words, I knew that she was pleased. A woman likes to be praised once in a while whether she deserves it or not. I took my rifle and started off for the forest. I thought myself there would be rain before night-fall. Great masses of black clouds hung over the mountains, and came a long distance down their sides. They seemed to be so full of water that it was impossible for them to rise up and float away.

"When I wanted to make sure of all the game I could carry, I went straight to the foot of the Mountains, and then taking one of the narrow ravines which led up among them, I would in a little time be loaded down with all the game I could carry home. I went in this direction now. As I neared the foot of the mountain, the sun disappeared behind the clouds, and soon after the air commenced to grow cooler, while at the same time it grew darker and the trees, as though night were coming on.

"The clouds increased fast, and looking up at the summit of the great mountain above my head, I could see the great masses of vapor rolling away into what clear sky still remained to the northwest. A storm was surely coming, but whether it would hold off until midnight was more than I could determine.

"Be that as it would, I had no thought of turning back. If I got wet to the skin, I was not at all fearful that it would do me harm.

"I entered the narrow valley and slowly made my way up, keeping near a sharp lookout for game, which I expected now to come upon at any moment, as the ravine was a good place for it.

"The deer, feeding on the coarse grass and stunted shrubs high up on the rocks, came down hither to find the shade and to slake their thirst in the sparkling water of the brook which leaped and gurgled in the bottom of the valley.

"Suddenly I saw a noble buck standing on a rock, with head aloft, and gazing in my direction as though he scented me.

"I raised my rifle and fired. The buck leaped high in the air, and then fell down among the rocks.

"After reloading my rifle, I went up to him, and found that he was motionless, the bullet having entered between the eyes.

"I was bending over the deer, feasting my eyes on the prize I had got, when suddenly a vivid flash of lightning almost blinded me, followed by a peal of thunder, which shook the rocks beneath my feet. A moment later great drops of rain began to fall. One of those tempests and rainfalls so common among the mountains was close upon me. I could hear it roaring like a waterfall as it came rushing down from the lofty heights above me.

"I knew that I should be drenched to the skin in a minute after it struck, and I glanced hastily about me in search of a place of shelter from its fury.

"I was close to the foot of the mountain where on one side it came down into the ravine, and as I glanced up and down along its base my eyes fell upon a dark aperture which seemed to lead in among the rocks. Within might be a cavern large enough to give me shelter.

"Another tremendous peal of thunder hastened my steps, although I was mindful of the errand on which I had come.

"I dragged the carcass of the deer after me, and in a few minutes had it in the cavern, where I could prepare it in a shape for carrying home when the storm should be over.

"I did not seek to fathom the depths of the cavern. Behind me all was blackness which no eye could penetrate.

"I thought I had seen terrific storms in the mountains, but I had to admit that nothing in my recollection came near to this.

"Instead of drops, the rain seemed to come down by the bucketful. There was almost a continual flash of lightning, while the roll of the thunder was deafening.

"But safe and dry, and intent upon my work of skinning the deer and quartering it up, I did not pay much heed to the tempest, whose roaring filled my ears with a terrible din.

"But suddenly I started up, with something very like fright tugging at my heart.

"The earth trembled where I stood. There was a terrible, horrible, grinding roar, which seemed to come from up the mountain directly above me.

"In a moment I knew what it was. A land-slide was coming.

"My first impulse was to rush out of the cavern, and I did take a step in that direction, but in a moment I saw that it would be a rush at on my part.

"Almost stunned by the terrible noise above me, I stood motionless.

"There was a rush and a roar above my head. It lasted for a minute, and then all was still. No sound could be heard, but the blackness of the darkest night was about me.

"In a moment I comprehended my situation. I was buried alive.

"The entrance of the cavern was completely blocked up, and I was tombled even more surely than if I had been laid away by human hands.

"What was I to do? How was I to escape from my living grave?

"There was but one way that I could conceive of, and that was to dig out.

"Without tools, this might prove a task more than I could accomplish, as the rocks and dirt heaped up at the mouth of the cavern might be many yards in thickness. Hope of escape seemed well-nigh impossible, and my heart sank within me as I realized my terrible condition.

"Another sound startled me, and caused me to turn my head in the direction of the back part of the cavern.

"All I could see was a pair of eyes, glowing dimly in the darkness.

"But the sound I knew well. It was the deep growl of a bear.

"I had company, to share with me my living tomb. The sound it made, told me that the brute was moving in my direction.

"I raised my rifle and took aim between the shining eyes. Another moment and I should have pulled the trigger, but a sudden thought flashed across my mind.

"A bear can dig well, and it might help me to escape.

"Instead therefore, of giving it a bullet, I seized one of the quarters of venison and threw it in its direction.

"There was another and deeper growl, and then a munching sound told me that it had commenced its feast.

"It took another quarter to satisfy its appetite, and then it began to approach me nearer.

There was some leaves and sticks scattered at my feet. These I scraped together, and to the pile added a tow garment that I wore. Then, with a flint and steel, I struck a light and soon had a flame blazing up which illuminated the interior of the cavern.

"By it I saw that a huge rock had completely filled up the entrance, so that escape was impossible.

"I looked toward my brute companion. For an instant it stared at me and the fire, then turned and retreated rapidly.

"Hope spring up in my heart. There must be another passage leading out of the cavern, through which the bear had gone.

"Making as good a torch as possible out of the burning fuel, I soon discovered that this was the case, and a current of air told me that it led to the outer world. When the bear had gone I could follow, and in a little time I stood outside in the pouring rain and howling wind.

"I looked about for my deliverer, the bear, but it was nowhere to be seen. I would not have harmed a hair on its body for its weight in gold. I bore it too much gratitude for that.

"I had no easy task in getting home, but I reached there by night-fall, thankful for my escape from what might have proved a living tomb."

Extend sympathy to some people, and they begin to cough all the more loudly, to show you how bad they are.

Some people think they pay a debt by telling their creditors every other day that they owe it.

George: "Laura, will you be my better half?" Laure: "Oh, George, how can I, and you so good?"

Listening to some people tell a story is equal to judging a view by what you can see through a dusty window.

"Do you like your new mamma, Charlie?" was asked of a precocious youngster of six. "No," he said loftily. "I do not care for hodie's society."

Maud—Really? I thought she would be the last person to marry him.

Mabel—Well, she was, wasn't she?

A 14 year old boy went into his mother's presence with one eye black, his lip swollen, and a ragged scratch across his cheek, and blood from which he had wiped off on his shirt sleeve. "Nieces," cried the parent, as he sneaked in, "have you been fighting again?"

"Nope," he sullenly grunted. "Then what on earth ails your face?"

"Jim Green's ma's dead," he replied.

"Well, suppose she is, what's that got to do with your bunged up face?"

"I seed Jim just now," answered the boy, "an, he looked awful and solemn."

"Well?"

"I didn't know what ter do to make him bright and chipper like, an' feelin' so sorry for him, I jest went up an' let him hit me a few licks."

"Did it help him?" asked the mother.

"Help him?" echoed the boy in a surprised tone, "course it did! Didn't you think it'd make you feel good to bust a fellow that way what had licked you every week for a year?"

SCOTT'S EMULSION

OF PURE COD LIVER OIL

AND HYPOPHOSPHITES

Almost as Palatable as Milk.

So digested that it can be taken, absorbed, and assimilated by the most sensitive stomach, when the plain oil cannot be tolerated, and by the combination of the oil with the hypophosphites is much more effective.

SKIPPER BEN'S GIRL.

If, in your travels, you ever visit the rugged coast of New England, you may come upon "The Cove," with its cluster of brown, gray and black wooden houses having queer, uneven roofs and crooked chimneys, in the little brown house—for his old mother was dead, too. A lonely time he had of it, when he was not at the Banks. In the evenings he would sit for hours with his pipe, staring into the fire, and thinking how different it might all have been if only Dolly had lived.

One night there was a terrible storm, and Skipper Ben sat by his lonely hearth, smoking and thinking. The wind blew and howled about the little brown house. It rushed down the chimney, and bent against the side of the house until it rocked. But Ben does not notice a bit of wind.

Presently his gloomy thoughts got the better of him. The tiny room seemed to grow as narrow and as suffocating as a grave, and he rushed out into the night and the storm, where he could draw in deep breaths of the wild, salt air.

There was no rain, but the clouds were scurrying swiftly across the sky. And well they might, with such a wind at their heels.

Such a wind! If Ben had not been the broad, sturdy fellow that he was, it would have blown him off his feet. But as it was, he strode up and down the beach with long, fierce strides, and heeded neither the wind nor the roaring surf.

Was it strange that, with the fierce storm raging without, and the equally fierce storm raging within, Skipper Ben should not have heard the shriek and cries of distress that night? Not so very strange, I think, but what was strange was that, above all the din and commotion, he should have heard a feeble wail—the faintest little wail in the world.

But he heard it, at any rate, and hurried to the spot whence it came. There, lying on the beach, with its frock securely fastened to a broken spar, was a little child.

"Why you poor little creature!" exclaimed Ben, as he unfastened the dress. "How 'n the world did you get out here?"

The baby stopped crying as soon as she saw him, and stretching out her tiny arms, gave a little chuckle of delight.

He picked her up tenderly, and, wringing out the soaked little garments, which were like cobwebs, and were trimmed with the finest lace, buttoned her up inside his heavy jacket.

Then it was that he heard the shouts and cries for the first time, and saw men rearing helplessly up and down the beach, and gazing seaward.

What were they looking at? Looking at nothing. They are staring and gaping at the place where a good ship had just gone to pieces. Could no one be saved? No, it was impossible. No boat could live in such a surf, and there's, moreover, the boat at the Cove.

The ship went to pieces where she struck. Of all the crew no one could have survived the tide, and of all the passengers, not one was saved—except the little baby buttoned up in Skipper Ben's rough pilot suit.

Banks and becoming in time one of the best fishermen in the Cove. But he never was a boy again; all his old high heartedness had vanished, and he became grave, moody and silent. For some years he lived, when he was at home, alone in the little brown house—for his old mother was dead, too. A lonely time he had of it, when he was not at the Banks. In the evenings he would sit for hours with his pipe, staring into the fire, and thinking how different it might all have been if only Dolly had lived.

Banks never to return, not supposing that he has said good-by for the last time to the youngsters at home.

The baby cried for "mamma" a little at first, but she soon learned to say "Ben" instead. And from that day on, the little room never became narrow and stuffy, and Ben's pipe was the pipe of peace and comfort.

The next year, when he went to the Bank's, he left her in the care of Lisha Tucker's wife, at the store; but the year after she cried so hard when he was going that he took her with him. And ever since she has been his constant companion. And he named her—Dolly. Five years have passed since that stormy night, and Dolly is six years old. She is a bright, happy little girl, and loves the grim old ocean dearly, even if it did so nearly become her tomb. Sometimes in the evening, when the wind is howling and shaking the little brown house, and the fire is roaring brightly and merrily up the chimney, Skipper Ben will tell Dolly how he found her lying on the beach, securely fastened to a broken spar.

Then he will pull out a little, old, worn leather trunk, and will take from it the once dainty baby clothes. They are yellow now and still stained with sea water. He will hold the delicate fabric in his hand, rough hand with reverential awe, and look with wonder at the little faced blue ribbons that once were shoulder knots.

"I wonder who your parents was?" he says to Dolly. "Only think what you might ha' been! Why, you might ha' been a Markis!"

Skipper Ben's round blue eyes become rounder and bluer at the thought, and he takes his pipe from his mouth.

"You might ha' been a Dorches!" But Dolly shakes her head with its brown curls and lays her cheek against Ben's rough coat, saying, "No, no! I'd rather be skipper Ben's girl!"

My father was Sheriff of a certain county in Kansas about twenty years ago, and during a certain summer we received a sentence for six months a tough fellow named Joe Williams. He had been sentenced for attempted horse stealing, and my father knew that a sharp watch must be kept over him or he would take French leave.

Joe had put in about two weeks on his term when my mother started off on a visit, was hurt en route, and father had to go to her. His first deputy and assistant jailer—a man of fifty, named Stebbins, who was his cousin. "Steb" was a peppery old chap and a great braggart. According to his statements he had licked more men killed more horses and helped lynch more desperadoes than any other man living. Father cautioned him over and over about watching Williams, who was the only prisoner we had, and "Steb" sturdily replied:

"You go right along and rest easy, Henry. If I was fool 'nuff to let him get away I'd expect to be shot and thrown to the gophers."

Father had scarcely gone when Williams began calling, and I went into the corridor with the old man to see what was wanted. I was only ten years old, but I can vividly recall everything. The jail was made of rough stone and one half of it was the Sheriff's residence. The jail part was only one big room, with a plan for stout men grating floor leading into the corridor. As the weather was warm, both corridor and cell doors were open. When we looked in on Joe he said:

"See here, Steb, I hear you are bragging a good deal about how many men you have put on their backs."

"There's no brag about it," replied the old man. "I never found a human I couldn't lay down in five minutes."

"That's all wind, and you know it," retorted Joe. "You ought to be ashamed of your jaw."

"Who you talking to?"

"To you, you old wind bag! You talk of wrestling! Why, I kin grease the floor with your carcass!"

"Don't git my dander up!" warned Steb in a tremulous voice, "or I'll trounce you!"

"Trounce me! Say, old blowhard I kin lather you with one hand tied behind me! If I could only git at you I'd make you holler in one round!"

"Shut up!"

"I won't, and you ain't big 'nuff to make me!"

"Yes, I am!"

"You're a liar!"

"Take that back!"

"Never!"

"Take that back or I'll come in and make pulp of you!"

"You didn't! I'll dare ye to come in and pint a finger at me!"

Some more of the sort followed, and Steb got the idea that he must enforce his authority or suffer a loss of prestige. He was the older but also the bigger man, and he kept getting mad until he finally peeled off his coat, unlocked the door and dodged in. He made for Williams, but the latter ducked under his arm, upset, me at the door, and was off like a shot, and before pursuit could be organized he was beyond reach. Old Steb stood in the back door and watched him for fully five minutes before saying a word. Then I heard him growl.

"Consarn him for skipping out, but I've got the consolation of knowing that he's the forty-third man I've licked under his boots in the last five years!"

"Sir," he said to the barkeeper of a saloon on Michigan avenue "I represent the United States Government."

"Yes—exactly. Have a drink?"

"I don't care if I do."

"What will you take?"

"Brandy."

It was placed before him, and after he had taken a pull, the barkeeper queried:

"Internal revenue, I suppose?"

"No."

"Don't you belong to the custom house?"

"Oh, no."

"Postoffice?"

"No."

"Some port office?"

"No."

"Then how do you represent the government?"

"As a humble citizen, sir—a man whose great grandfather fought at Lexington."

"Oh, that's it. Well, let's see how well you can fight at Detroit."

And he flung him over a table and booted him out doors, and the representative of the government had no fight in him. On the contrary, when he was safe across the street he said:

"That's 20 cents' worth of brandy for 10 cents' worth of kicking and the United States is way ahead!"

A MIDNIGHT ESCAPE.

A Story of the French Revolution.

At the Castle of R—, about three leagues from Bordeaux, at 8 in the evening of the 29th of October, 1792, a young lady and a child about 8 years old were assembled in a low room, lighted by small and barred windows. The elder person was full of painful thoughts; but the child made his shouts heard, which were repeated by the echoes through the corridors of the castle. Trunks and packages were strewn about the room. Count R— frequently showed movements of impatience and anxiety as he turned his eyes upon his wife and son. His agitation betrayed the fears of his heart.

"William is a long time before he returns," he said, rising from his seat; "has the scheme failed? Had he betrayed me? Oh God! save my wife and son!"

"My dear," said the lady, gently, "cease to worry yourself; Jacques, the footman, is an honest fellow."

"Yes; he is a Republican," replied the Count.

"Still he is an honest man," replied the lady.

"But William ought to remember that we are impatient to see him back again. I feel very much inclined to go as far as the village."

"Do not go out!" exclaimed Mme. de R—, throwing herself on her husband's neck; "do not go out, I implore you."

"I am armed," said the Count.

"Wait only a few minutes. William cannot be long."

The Count sat down again. His son Edward, who had been playing about the room, now climbed up on his knees. He took him in his arms, kissed his forehead, and then appeared calmer.

Half an hour had passed away in silence, when two gentle knocks at the door announced William's return. He was followed by a man who carried a bulky packet under his arm.

"Monsieur de Comte," said William, "here is Jacques. All is arranged; we must start."

"You are very late my friend," replied the Count.

"Because I could not get out of that wretched public house until I had drunk to the health of the republic, for I must pass as a patriot, as a citizen, and I don't know what else be said."

"It is true, M. le Comte," said Jacques; "but here we are at last. I bring you the clothes which you must put on at once. You must disguise yourself as a sailor—it is the safest thing to do. And for you, Madame, here are caps and petticoats of my wife's and a cabin boy's dress for M. Edward. All this is necessary, otherwise there are no means of saving you."

"Brave man!" said the Count, pressing his hand with an emotion which he could not conceal.

"Listen, M. le Comte: I am only a simple sailor, owner of the boat which my late father left me. It is three years since that terrible north-west gale stripped me of all I possessed, but it was you who set me afloat again. Do you think that we are folk who don't remember all that?"

"No, no, by the faith of a sailor; and it is with our hearts that we are going to brave the sea, for we are going to brave the sea, for we are going to brave the sea."

"Here is my purse," said the Count, "take it."

"I have no need of it," said Jacques; "keep it you will want it in a foreign land. Before long it will be midnight; then it will be high tide; then you must go one, by one, to the shore at Martinet. If you went altogether it would arouse suspicion; and we have a bad lot in the village who can't sleep. I know very well why—the wicked never sleep."

The Count R— had given proofs of his courage and his love for his royal family, both at Paris and at Versailles. He was one of those brave men who exposed themselves to death on the 10th of August rather than to allow the Queen's apartments to be profaned by a furious mob.

The Count had retired to his castle, with the hope of living there unnoticed among the peasants who loved him.

One morning he saw a stranger mounted on a fine horse, covered with dust and foam, enter the castle courtyard; the man gave him a note and at once departed. Count R—, astonished, opened the note and read the words: "Fly, Monsieur le Comte, your life is threatened. The Representative has just ordered your arrest; you have not a moment to lose. Fly! It is a friend who implores you to do so. This evening it will be too late." When he read this note the Count thought it might be a snare which was laid for him; he resolved to remain at home rather than separate himself from his wife and son. However he informed the Countess of the message, who less confident than her husband, with tears in her eyes, implored him to go. It was then decided that they should all start together. But how were they to fly? They were still deliberating when William, the Count's man of business, was announced. This man was young; he had been brought up at the castle. He was a peasant who had received the usual education of his class, but who concealed under a coarse exterior and rough clothes a quick penetration.

Count R—, therefore, at once told him his fears, and informed him of the letter which he had just received from Bordeaux. William perceived the necessity for a prompt departure.

He prepared a plan which was accepted.

"Do not trouble yourself, Monsieur le Comte," he said. "I will intrust you to the hands of a man who will know how to lead you to safety, so you have nothing to be anxious about."

William went to see his cousin Jacques, the owner of a boat. All was soon arranged between them. The Count and his family were to be landed in Spain, or Jersey, or taken on board the English fleet, which for some days had been in sight of Corduan. Jacques was one of those old sea wolves of which many are to be found at the mouths of rivers. Entirely occupied by his arduous calling, he troubled himself very little about the various forms of government which for the last three years had succeeded each other. All he cared for was to be able to govern his own bark; and if he had any difficulty it was only when the sea was rough, and the winds prevented him from affording help to vessels in danger. Formerly he had distinguished himself by his courage on board the squadron of the Comte de Grasse. He was honest, upright and kind hearted. When his cousin proposed to him the perilous mission of rescuing the Count from the plots of his enemies, it was with the greatest enthusiasm that he accepted it. A squeeze of William's hand was the pledge of his determination.

Midnight had just sounded from the castle clock. The Count started. William's presence prevented a scene which might have deprived the fugitives of that strength and energy of which they then stood so greatly in need.

After a debate, full of the most devoted love, it was decided that Mme. R— and her son should go on first, and then the Count should follow them in a few minutes.

Rather more than five minutes had elapsed since Mme. R— had left under the escort of Jacques and one of his men, when the bell of the outer gate of the castle rang violently. William left the Count, and went out by a secret door to examine who their late visitors might be. It was not long before he perceived that they were men armed with attack swords and guns, who ordered the porter in the name of the law to open the gate and to deliver up to them the keys of the castle. The porter, who was in William's confidence, parleyed with them as long as he could and did not yield up the keys till he saw that all resistance was impossible. The haste which the chief of the band made to reach the Count's apartments, counting as he said, in a loud voice, to find the hair in his hole, proved that he was well acquainted with the castle.

During this time M. de R— and William were on their way to the shore by cross roads. Twenty times they risked their lives, but what was the despair of M. de R— when at last they arrived to find neither the boat nor his wife nor Jacques!

"You have betrayed me, William!" he said, seizing his arm.

"No, Monsieur le Comte," replied William, firmly.

At the same instant a man came out of a ditch and approached them slowly. Count R— advanced to meet him, a pistol in his hand; and when he was near enough to recognize him he saw that it was Jacques.

"What have you done with my wife and child?" he said in a voice trembling with emotion.

"Silence!" said Jacques, putting his finger to his mouth. "Silence, Monsieur le Comte! or you are lost. They are in safety. You must follow me." After an hour's walk they arrived at the banks of a very high rock. Jacques, making a trumpet with his hands, hailed a bark, which the morning fog prevented them from perceiving. They did not wait long for an answer.

"William," said Jacques, "return to the castle and watch over the corn and stores. Those rogues have come as far as Martinet, and we've narrowly escaped being caught by them. They have gone on further, and they may find us here yet."

"Farewell, Monsieur le Comte! courage and confidence," said William; "we will take good care of all in the castle."

The Count pressed his hand affectionately, "Farewell," he said to him in a choking voice.

Three minutes had not elapsed since William had left the Count and Jacques when he returned, running and making signs which were only too well understood by the fugitives. "Embark!" cried William, "here they are!" but the boat had not yet touched the shore; they heard the oars beating the water with hurried strokes; on the other side they perceived armed men, who were pursuing them, running, who evidently saw them. It was all over with them. "There is only one means of safety," said Jacques; "follow me." Both rushed into the water, the sailors in the boat redoubled their efforts, and in less than a minute they arrived to aid the fugitives. The wretches who pursued them, furious at not having been able to capture them, raised savage cries and terrible threats. One of them, who appeared more exasperated than his comrades, and who was armed with a gun, took aim at the fugitives; he fired, and a ball struck Jacques in the leg. The unfortunate man fell to the bottom of the boat. "It is nothing," said Jacques, as he got up again.

In the evening, when they passed near the cutter stationed at the mouth of the river, they were hailed; but they were able to answer in a satisfactory manner. They cruised about till the morning, hoping to meet an English vessel. At early dawn they saw a sail coming straight to them; it was an English frigate. Jacques steered toward it, and soon he had the happiness of putting on board the Count and his family, who were conveyed safely to England.

Count R— profited by the first law in favor of emigrants to return to France. His property had, indeed, been sold, but he knew that his steward William, had become the purchaser of it to preserve it for him. An unknown hand had supplied him with the means of paying a higher price than that offered by the Count's enemies. This friendly hand was the same which a week before had written the note urging the Count's departure; this hand was that of a man who could not forget that Count R—, by lending him a large sum of money, had rescued him from the infamy of a convict's life.

When Count R— returned to his castle he was welcomed with the greatest joy. He threw himself on William's neck and embraced him as a brother.

"And Jacques?" he asked immediately, "where is Jacques?"

"Here he is, Monsieur le Comte," replied William, pointing to a man who out of respect, was keeping in the background; and this man had a wooden leg.

"Ah!" cried the Count, "then you are my brave fellow, who saved us! But you are wounded! How did that come about?"

"Oh, it is nothing; it does not hinder me from working."

"But in what battle did you lose your leg?"

"In a battle in which the combatants were not very numerous, but which was not without glory. Do you remember, Monsieur le Comte, the shot which fell on the boat?"

The Count embraced the old sailor with tears in his eyes.

The Count, William and Jacques henceforth dwelt together in the Chateau of R—; and in winter evenings they often related to their children the adventures of the night of October 29, 1792.

"Your face is familiar, but I can't place you," said the street-car conductor, as he opened a plugged quarter among his change.

"Mudge—I believe you told me a couple of weeks ago that you were going to try making love to your landlady's daughter, so that the old lady would be a little easier on you. Did it work?"

"Yubaley—Work! I should say not! I played it so well that the old woman thought I was immensely infatuated, and tried to raise the price of my board on the strength of it."

The Paris edition of the New York Herald quotes Dr. Brown as maintaining that to cut the tariff off is to demand a priceless price. You begin with your tariff and you end with your tariff. You begin with your tariff and you end with your tariff. You begin with your tariff and you end with your tariff.

The following is a list of the names of the persons who have been elected to the office of Justice of the Peace for the year 1890.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10th.—The House of Representatives of the House held a caucus Tuesday in which they experienced how vexatious speaker Reed's arbitrary rulings are when applied at home. The caucus met to decide upon the order of business. The River and Harbor bill was the first thing, but Mr. Reed interrupted that the tariff bill should have precedence. Then they wanted equal consideration, but were denied that, or any time debate and were extremely exasperated. The time to be taken up by tariff talk was discussed. Speaker Reed suggested that general debate be postponed and the bill taken up in detail at once. He knew the bill would pass and there wasn't any use of much talking. Mr. McKinley jumped to his feet and protested vehemently against the suggestion that no debate was necessary. He declared that the party need not fear to discuss the bill before the country; that to cut off general debate would be an outrage upon both minority and majority. Mr. Burrows created amusement by saying that some people having made a tariff speech thought the subject exhausted for all time to come, and were naturally impatient at hearing other people talk. (This was a drive at Mr. Reed's tariff speech two years ago.) The speaker then laid down his ultimatum—There would be fifty more working days this session and the majority could give the whole time to the tariff if it would, but it must be understood that other legislation suffered as 'twas very necessary to adjourn early. He probably meant public buildings and other little jobs so important to candidates for reelection. The outcome of it all was a compromise that the bill should pass the House and be in the Senate in a fortnight.

Importers of all kinds that put up their money for the high tariff candidate have discovered their mistakes and are daily harrassing the Ways and Means Committee for favors and relief. The immediate tarries of sugar made from imported molasses, now insist upon a bounty. But out west the light of reason is finally dawning upon the people. The leading republican paper in Minnesota, the St. Paul Pioneer Press, says, that if the McKinley tariff bill passes, that state will go democratic; that all the farmer's necessities are grievously taxed and that he is given no corresponding relief. The session will be a long one. The republicans have full power to enact any measure they want and are not likely to leave until the approach of the congressional elections this fall warns them to go home and correct the ideas the farmers are getting that the tariff is a heavy tax.

The Senate republican committee has abandoned all hope of reaching a satisfactory solution of the silver question. The whole matter will therefore have to be determined on the floor of the Senate. An influential member of the Finance committee said that if they desired it, the free silver people could pass their amendment as the majority of the Senate was in favor of it. But that the President had intimated that he wouldn't approve a free coinage bill and for that reason the minds of the silver men were now whether they would go ahead in spite of this intimation, or whether they should agree to some compromise that would save the President's right.

Disappearance of the "Black Hole."

There was on the farm of Alex. H. Bidington, near the Big Spring in this county, a well or pool of water, the depth of which was never ascertained, by the oldest inhabitants or their ancestors, though many efforts were made so to do. It was about fifty feet in circumference and the water perfectly black in appearance, though quite clear when taken out. Hence it was called the "Black Hole." It was located on a flat piece of ground at the foot of Middle mountain. The water stood about two feet from the surface, and was never known to get higher or lower. Around it was a favorite place for cattle to lay down, and although water was scarce in that immediate locality, and the hole never fenced or otherwise enclosed, stock were never known to approach it to drink. It is located but a short distance from the public road, and strangers, who had seen an account of it, in Homes' History of Va., or heard of it from other sources, often stopped in the road, and visited this pool of water.

A few days ago, Wm. A. Varner, who lives on the farm, was passing by to salt his cattle, and discovered that the earth had fallen in around it, the water all gone, the Hole filled up to within about 15 or 20 feet of the top. The new Hole was a perfect mirage, and persons who have dropped rocks therein, have imagined that they could hear the rocks fall in water at a very great distance, and the theory is, that by reason of the quantity of rain that has fallen in the last year, that a vein of water from this cavern, had found its way to the Black Hole, passing through the same, and this belief is sustained by the fact that two wet weather springs, that came out about one mile south, ran muddy water one whole day, a few days before Mr. Varner's discovery, while all other streams were perfectly clear.

Traveler's Repose Items.

Misses Mollie Arbogast and Belle Keller, who have been visiting friend here have returned home.

Miss Mary Cackley, of Dunmore, returned to her home, Saturday after paying a visit to Miss Daisy Yeager.

Corn planting is about over in this neighborhood.

MATILDA.

Dunmore Doings.

Nice weather. Most of our farmers are done planting corn.

Sheep shearing is next in order.

The most needed of all thing is good roads and they should be worked this month.

Col. S. C. Pritchard, has returned home from Tucker Co., where he has been for six weeks.

Mr. W. H. Cuckley and daughter, Miss Otie, left this week for Bonce-verte to spend a month. Miss Otie will also visit Richmond, Va.

L. C. Bartlett, is painting the new church at this place.

Mr. R. B. Mason, has moved in the D. B. McElwain house.

The Lumber R. R. has been all taken up ready for shipment.

Mr. R. L. Nottingham, is off to see his best girl this week.

A Sunday school at X Road school house, was organized last Sunday, with a large enrollment.

Praying at Green Bank, next Sunday, at 2 p. m.

Sunday School and preaching at this place next Sunday.

TOM SAWYER.

Split Rock Briefs.

Not seeing anything in your paper from this part of the Co., for some time, I will give you a few items.

The weather has been wet and cold, mixed with snow by intervals, for some time past.

Corn planting is later than usual, on account of bad weather.

The lumber business has got to be an important matter in this section.

Wooded saw mill is doing good work.

Jas. Gibson, Jr., has moved his large engine near here and will be employed sawing cherry lumber for the rest of the season.

Mr. Brown will start twenty four horse teams in the near future, hauling cherry lumber from here to Elkin's.

Miss Bella Clark, is teaching a subscription school here with a good attendance. Why not more of these kind of schools in the Co?

The sick in this immediate vicinity are on the mend. A few cases of whoopingcough, mumps and Grippe.

Woods McLaughlin expects to move to Elkin's soon.

Some fishermen of Baltimore succeeded in catching a fine lot of trout, and returned home rejoicing. Why don't the farmers have their land posted to prevent foreigners from destroying all the fish?

A thing of beauty is a joy forever," but if Harrison's administration continues this hard to the end, there certainly will be great rejoicing when it closes.

The following memorial notice we clip from the Episcopal Methodist, and publish by special request: DEAN HRO. BOYD.

Since my return from Conference, it has been my sad duty to bury two of my old parishioners, Rev. Jas. E. Moore and Mrs. Caroline Seales, both of Marvin Chapel congregation Levelton circuit, Lewisburg District.

Bro. Moore was born in Pocahontas co., W. Va., May 26, 1811, and died at his residence, Mill Point, same county, March 26, 1890, in the 78th year of his age. He was converted September 17, 1831, at a campmeeting held near Hallsboro, same county, under the ministry of Rev. Mr. Spriggs. He was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of the Huntersville circuit, November 4, 1837; was ordained local deacon in Baltimore by Bishop Waugh, and ordained local elder March 7, 1860, by Bishop Wightman. He was a local preacher of the highest type, consecrated to that part of the work which God and his Church called him. He was abundant in labors and liberal in his support of Christ's cause. His secular duties never seemed to hinder him from attending to the wants of the Church. He married and buried more people, baptized more children, and was instrumental in the conversion of more souls, than any other preacher that ever lived in his county. All classes loved and praised him. He was very sick when I left for Conference, and afterwards expressed a desire to live until my return that he might hear from the brethren. This privilege was denied him, but he went up to join that host of preachers who had crossed the flood, and are resting under the shade of the "Tree of Life." A large family mourn his loss. Among them are the wives of Revs. R. M. Wheeler and W. M. Ballenger of our Conference. His end was peace. He has taken his crown. On a spot of ground where Bishop Asbury once stood, and it is said once held a Conference, we buried him to await the resurrection morn."

TAKE A WOMAN'S ADVICE.

This is a notice to the public that I have had to publish my name in the Times, and I am sorry to do so. I have been the victim of a very bad case of the "Poor, Foolish Men" and I am now in a very bad way. I am now in a very bad way. I am now in a very bad way.

JOHN'S CHOICE.

BY HELEN FORREST GRAYEN.

"Engaged, eh?" said John Jaggett. "Well, I never looked at it in exactly that light before!"
 "We've all took it for granted," said Mrs. Jaggett, pursing her thin lips and knitting away very fast. "Does she think so, mother?"
 "What else can she think, John?"
 "I never asked her to marry me, mother."
 "There's other ways of proposing to girls, John, except askin' 'em to marry you in so many words," said the old lady.

John Jaggett gave his thick, brown moustache a resentful tug. "I'm blessed if I know what they are, mother," said he.

"Everybody has took it for granted, John," repeated his mother, severely. "And Melinda is a capital house-keeper—just the girl I'd like to see in charge of things here, now that I'm getting old and feeble."

John Jaggett put his hand caressingly on his mother's shoulder. "Why, mother," said he, "don't talk that way. So far as I can see! you're as young and spry as you ever were."

Mrs. Jaggett shook her head, mournfully.

"No, I ain't John," said she. "While a woman gets to be sixty, she begins to fall in spite of everything—and rheumatism all ways run in my side of the family. If I could only see you married and settled down before the Lord, sees fit to call me away."

John whistled.

"Time enough, mother," said he. "Quite time enough."

"I don't know about that, John. You were thirty yesterday!" urged Mrs. Jaggett.

"How the dear old mother remembers things!" said he, laughing. "And Melinda Butts is three and thirty."

"A year or two don't make no great odds, John."

"Well, perhaps it don't," he assented.

"John," cried the woman, as her son took up his hat, "where are you going?"

"I'm going to New York for a day or two, to see about that new hay-cutter, mother before the grass gets too high," answered he.

"To-day, John?"

"Yes, to-day. Why not?"

"Go over and see Melinda first, John. Get something settled," pleaded Mrs. Jaggett.

"Why, mother, what a hurry you're in!"

"You're a county once before, and a better off it has never had. It is very necessary for us to add as every body in the County as him to be a thorough business man, and exact though kind everyone."

stove for his mother and finally stopped at a little millinery store, kept by a former Skull Mountain neighbor.

"I want to get mother a lace cap or a worsted shoulder-cape, or something," thought he.

But the store was full of strange faces, and a new name gleamed, in newly-painted letters, on the sign above the door.

Hello!" said Jaggett. "What's the matter?"

"Mrs. Mixsell was buried last month," said the new incumbent, a stout widow with a row of artificial auburn curls which did not in the least match her black hair.

"And poor Alice is crying her eyes out in the back room. Praps you know some of her friends? It don't stand to reason as I can keep her here, with three daughters of my own. And you know—"

"Oh, Mr. Jaggett, uttered a soft appealing voice from the stuffy, half-lighted little apartment beyond "Is that you? Oh, poor mother has died and left me, and I don't know what to do!"

Alice Mixsell was a fair haired, mountain-daisy-complexioned girl of seventeen. Her blue eyes, drenched in tears, looked pitifully up to John Jaggett—her coral lip trembled. They were old acquaintances, and he had always admired her. Nay, once or twice, when he had been staying in the city, he had taken her to a theatre matinee or a picture gallery. As he looked at her, sweet, helpless loveliness, a great wave of protecting tenderness swept over his whole nature.

"Alice," said he, "my darling! Sweet Alice, dry your tears. Henceforward you shall be my care. Get your bonnet and things! We'll go to the little parsonage around the corner and be married at once—and I'll take you back home with me!"

Alice drew back—her velvet blue eyes flashed.

"No!" said she. "You are saying this simply out of pity!"

"I'm saying it because I love you!" he cried, earnestly—and the deep light of his dark eyes corroborated his words.

Man is a creature of impulse, and John Jaggett's feelings had taken such complete possession of him, that it was not until Alice had become his wedded wife that he thought of Melinda, of the red hair and turkey-egg complexion.

"But it will all be right," he argued to himself. "Mother can't help liking dear little Alice. She and Mrs. Mixsell used to be good friends of old days before the Mixsell was sold; and Alice will be a sunbeam in the house—God a star!"

It was the yellow twilight of May when John brought his blushing young wife to the millinery.

"I'll surprise the mother," said John. "We'll go around by our own tree lane and creep in by the back door. And you shall be in the keeping room when she comes in. She's talking to some of the carriage block, now!"

"No company, I think, John," Alice, her heart fluttering like a bird in its cage. "It's a carryall, big trunk strapped on behind, full, red-haired woman step—"

"Ob, John, who can it be?"

John Jaggett changed color, as he gazed the shrill, nasal accents of Melinda Butts!

Jaggett; but after what you said to me, and neighbors' gossip and all, why, of course—"

John drew a long breath as he realized this new complication. His mother had proposed to Melinda Butts for him, as he had jestingly suggested, and here she was, bag and baggage, an embodied acceptance of the offer.

"Am I a Mormon in spite of myself?" he thought. "How, in the name of all the fates and furies, am I to get out of this tangle?"

"Sit still a minute, Allie," he said to his pretty young wife. "I'll go and tell them you're here."

"But if you've got company, John—"

"No company can be more honored than my wife, Allie," he said, gently, as he passed into the shady little parlor, where a scent of dried rose leaves came from the quaint old China jar on the mantle.

There stood a lank, spectacled, elderly man.

"Why, it's Lawyer Judd!" said John, starting back. "How do you do, Mr. Judd? May I ask what has procured us the honor of this visit?"

Lawyer Judd smiled and wriggled, and interwove his respectable-gloved fingers in each other, after a most embarrassed fashion.

"How are you, Mr. Jaggett—how are you?" said he. "Well, to be candid with you, I came here with the young lady outside."

"You did?"

"Yes, I did," nodded the lawyer, who was one of those restless individuals who can never keep still a minute, but slipped and writhed and twisted himself about like a snake in black cassimere garments. "On—he, he, he!—a little question of matrimony."

John flushed to the roots of his wavy brown hair.

Was this to be a matter of breach of promise? Did they imagine for a second that he was to be coerced like this?

"Mr. Judd," said he, "there is some mistake here."

"I hope not, neighbor Jaggett," said the lawyer, more like the letter S than ever—"I hope not. Why should there be a mistake?"

"And," went on John, excitedly. "I don't propose to be bullied! I have never engaged myself to the young woman, nor have I given her any reason to believe—"

"No, no—no, to be sure not!" uttered the lawyer, swaying himself to and fro. "If I had supposed so, I should certainly never have married her."

"Married whom?" demanded John.

"Married Mrs. Elias Judd, to be sure—the late Miss Melinda Butts. This morning, Mr. Jaggett; and we're on our way to the Albany boat now, and my—ahem!—wife has stopped to bid your respected mother goodbye as we came past. And really, glancing at a turnip-shaped silver watch which he carried in a fob pocket, "we have no time to spare. Melinda, my dear—"

He was amazed at the vehemence and cordiality with which John Jaggett wrung his hand.

"I congratulate you, my dear sir—congratulate you with all my heart!" said he. "Where is Mrs. Judd? Let me have the pleasure of expressing my good wishes to her also!"

And when the late Miss Melinda Butts came in, rugged, hard featured and coarse, he thought of the little human rebound waiting out on the morning room window, and less time in the happening than has been consumed in their relation; and when, finally, the dust of departure rolled after Mr. Judd's respectable carriage wheels, Mrs. Jaggett turned tearfully to her son.

"There, John," said she, "I told you how it would be! Melinda Butts is married and gone, and I haven't got no daughter-in-law, after all."

"Yes you have, mother," said John, his whole countenance growing radiant as he took her hand and led her into the room where Alice now sat, her innocent heart full of vague wonder and surmising.

"I was married to Alice Mixsell the day before yesterday."

Alice lifted her blue, wistful eyes to Mrs. Jaggett's amazed face.

"Mother died last month, said she. Will you be my mother now?"

Mrs. Jaggett clasped the girl to her heart.

"Yes dear, I will," she faltered.

"Any one that John loves I'm going to love too. And we did need some woman about the house younger and smarter than I am. Kiss me, Alice! and now we'll have our tea. But, John, why didn't you tell me before?"

"Because I didn't know it myself, mother, said John Jaggett. "But I do think I've made a better bargain than Lawyer Judd; don't you?"

"Well," said Mrs. Jaggett, looking at Alice, "I—don't—know—but—that—you—have!"

MAN'S FLATTERY OF WOMAN.—

I would advise young women not to depend for happiness upon the flatteries of men.—It is a poor compliment to your sex that so many men feel obliged in your presence to offer unmeaning compliments. Men capable of elegant and elaborate conversation elsewhere sometimes feel called upon at the door of the drawing-room to drop their common sense and to dole out sickening flatteries. They say things about your dress, and about your appearance that you know, and they know, are false. They say you are an angel. You know you are not. They tell you that "you are looking singularly beautiful this evening," when you know very well that the remark is only a commonplace one. Some men think that a conversation with a woman is interesting only as it is dotted and spiced with flatteries and meaningless compliments. Determined to tell the truth in office, and store, and shop, they consider it honorable to lie to a woman. The same thing that they told you on this side of the drawing-room, three minutes ago they said to some one on the other side of the drawing-room. Oh, let no one trample on your self-respect. The meanest thing on which a woman can build her happiness is the flatteries of men.—Rev. T. De Witt Talmage in March Ladies Home Journal.

Omitting A Custom Office

The famous Hungarian, Count Zichy, who lived on a princely income in Vienna, was, in his younger days, well known all over Europe on account of the bets he made and generally won. Once, when there was a heavy duty imposed on every head of cattle entering the Austrian capital, he made a bet that he would carry a lamb duty free through the gate of Vienna, and that the gate-keeper, who acts as imperial officer, adjusting and receiving the duty, would be glad to let him pass.

Next morning, the count, disguised in the clothes of a butcher, his butcher knife in his hand, his shirt sleeves rolled up, and carrying a heavy sack on his shoulder, made his way to one of the fashionable gates of Vienna. But the watchful officer soon espied him.

"What have you in that sack, fellow?"

"A dog, sir."

"A dog? Dog yourself! Down with that sack! I know fellows like you sometimes carry dogs in sacks through the gates, and sell them for mutton in town. Down with your sack!"

"But it's nothing but a dog, and a bad dog, too. I will."

"Never mind what you will. Down with your sack!"

The officer pulled the sack from the supposed butcher's shoulder, cut the string, and, sure enough, out jumped one of the biggest dogs in Vienna. The dog rushed against the faithful government servant, landed him several steps away in the gutter, and then left for parts unknown. After him went the young butcher, shaking his big knife before the eyes of the frightened officer, and exclaiming:

"I'll settle you after I catch that dog!"

About two hours afterward, the face of the butcher again appeared before the raised window of the gate office.

"I have just caught that dog again. Would you like to look at him?"

"Get away! Get out, you and your infernal dog!" And with a crash the smiling butcher entered Vienna.

But no dog was that time in his sack, but the fattest lamb that could be found in the suburbs of the capital.

Huntersville, W. Va. "That's the sort of a town to live in," remarked Headley taking his eyes from the paper.

"What about it?"

"Why, it's so healthy that nobody but a doctor would be able to tell the difference between the town and the country. I have been here for three years, and I have never been sick a day."

If a woman would believe less of what a man tells her before marriage and more of what he tells after, the wedded state would be a much more harmonious affair.

Parishioner—In what way think you?

Visitor—He talks like a man who has experienced religion.

Mrs. Figg—"Isn't there any way to get rid of that young Jinks who keeps calling on Clara, without positively insulting him?" Mr. Figg—"Why, certainly. Just give him the baby to hold the next time he comes." Mrs. Figg—"Do you reckon that'll start him?" Mr. Figg—"Why, I should think it would!"

"Johnnie," said a prominent mine operator to his youngest the other day, "I'll give you a dollar if you'll dig up the front yard already for your sister's new garden."

"All right," said Johnnie, thoughtfully, "but I shall have to ask for 25 percent of the contract price in advance. Not as an evidence of good faith, but for working capital."

"Work—what do you mean?"

"Well, you see, I guess I'll just bury the quarter somewhere, and tell all the boys in the neighborhood that a pirate hid some treasure around there. When they strike that quarter, they'll make the dirt fly, I can tell you. In that way I can clean up about seventy five percent. In fact I—"

"Well, what?"

"In fact I don't know but what I can also arrange so as to find that quarter myself. I'll work it just like that salted mine you were telling mamma about unloading on the street, last night."

And the father wept tears of joy, as he thought what a cold day it would be for Jay and Rufus when this boy grew up.

Indigestion

It is not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Mich.:

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."

E. H. MOORE.

To the voters of Pocahontas County.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Pocahontas County, at the election, Nov. 4th, 1890.

Respectfully,
J. C. ARDAGAST.

—Samuel Schreckengost and J. A. Gifford started last week for Montana.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McComb and Geo. W. Wagner returned from Staunton last Monday.

—D. McNeill and Geo. Baxter are on Anthony's Creek in Greenbrier County doing some surveying.

—All scald and skin diseases, dandruff, falling of the hair, gray or faded hair, may be cured by using that famous hair restorer, Hall's Hair Renewer.

—We can save you 20 per cent. on Huggins' Spring Wagons, Haas and Conklin Wagons. John Wurts & Co., Frankford, W. Va.

—Rev. Christopher Sydenstricker, of Hillsboro, spent last Thursday night in Huntersville, and preached a most acceptable sermon at the Methodist Church.

—The A. C. L. Gatewood, of Big Spring, passed through Huntersville last Friday on his return from Virginia, where he had been called by the death of his brother, W. B. Gatewood.

—Cram Mills, Has Rakes, Conklin Wagons, Harvesting Tools, &c., at Simon's, Workman & Best, Ronceverte, W. Va.

—Slight derangements of the stomach and bowels may often be corrected by taking only one of Ayer's Pills. Though not having the pills, you may disorder increase, and a regular lot of sickness follow. For the want of a nail, the shoe was lost, &c.

—McComb's Harvesting machine and full line of repairs for same, at Simon's, Workman & Best, Ronceverte, W. Va.

—We are going to ask all who are interested in the purchase of the new Methodist church at Huntersville to please go to the office of the undersigned, and see the plans and specifications.

—The new Methodist church at Huntersville is now under construction, and will be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1891.

—The new Methodist church at Huntersville is now under construction, and will be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1891.

—Capt. E. A. Smith has contracted to stock a large body of timber owned by the St. Lawrence Lumber and Manufacturing Co., on Meadow Creek in Greenbrier County. Last week he passed through town on his way to the timber to begin operations.

—Rock Salt for cattle and horses; the only style of Salting used by the best Stockmen west. Buy only "Horse" brand. Simms, Workman & Best, agents for Greenbrier and Pocahontas Counties.

—Savages expect to imbibe bravery by drinking the blood of their brave enemies. A more enlightened method of vitalizing the blood is by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It braces up the nerves and gives strength and fortitude to endure the trials of life.

—Double Shovel Plows, Ball tongues and iron and steel shapes of all kinds for home-made plows at Simms, Workman & Best's, Ronceverte, W. Va.

—The Editor, Jno. E. Campbell, is visiting in Virginia this week and the "Times" is running itself, a good excuse for all defects.

—Ex Gov. E. W. Wilson will address the people of Pocahontas county at Huntersville on Monday, June 16th, the first day of Circuit court. He will discuss the tariff question particularly as it relates to the agricultural interest of this section. The Governor is a vigorous talker and believes in calling things by their right names. Every body will do well to come out and hear him.

—We have a lot of last years new Deering Mowers that we will sell cheap for cash. Call early. John Wurts & Co., Frankford, W. Va.

—H. S. Rucker and C. F. Moore were down at Hillsboro last Saturday on professional business.

—L. M. McClintic, Jas. A. Sharp and Gilbert Sharp were fishing up William's River last week, with good success we are told.

—We are informed that everything sold at Mr. W. F. Ervine's last Friday brought all it was worth. It is usually so at public sales.

—Last Sunday evening at about 9 o'clock some one carried away from the Wagner Hotel a trunk belonging to Mr. J. P. McComb, which among other things contained about $225 in money. Early Monday morning the trunk was found in a meadow not far from the Hotel. It had been broken open and searched but the trunk in his haste had overlooked $100 of the money; succeeding however in carrying with about $125. It is not positively known who the thief is, but all the circumstances indicate that it was a certain individual who had been stopping at the Hotel for some weeks, and who disappeared about the same time the trunk walked out.

—Some people wonder why the "boom" don't strike Pocahontas. They see no reason why we should not advance as well as other places. The reason is obvious. Just take a glance at the road around the hill opposite Huntersville, look at the new road near the Lockridge ford, stand on the bank of Knapp's Creek and view the bridge across it, go then to the records and see what our people are taxed to make these shabby improvements, and you will wonder that Pocahontas has managed to escape bankruptcy. It is no burden if the revenue can be so applied as to reduce the value of property, but where the tax is levied on the land with no regard to its value, except such as to its bare surface, it is a most oppressive and unjust tax.

—A. W. Wurts & Co., Ronceverte, W. Va.

—On last Saturday a terrific rain and hail storm passed over the vicinity of Hillsboro between 11 and 12 o'clock a. m., doing considerable damage to gardens and growing crops. Shortly afterward the sky partially cleared up and the sun shone out as if the storm were all over, when to the surprise of every one a vivid flash of lightning was seen and simultaneously was heard a startling peal of thunder. It was soon discovered that the lightning had struck the stable of W. H. Overholt, standing a very short distance from his dwelling and store house. At first it was thought the stable was on fire, but fortunately it was not. There were six horses in the stable at the time, two belonging to Mr. Overholt, two to Mr. Henry Perry, one to Mr. John R. Marshall and one to Mr. C. F. Moore. They were all standing with their heads close together. One of Mr. Perry's horses was instantly killed; the other one, one of Mr. Overholt's and Mr. Moore's were also knocked down by the shock, but not hurt at all. The loss to Mr. Perry was a very serious one. He is an industrious man of limited means, and is left without a team, having but the two horses, the better one of which was killed. The destruction however was small to what it might have been, as one or two parties who had been feeding the horses had been away from the stable but a few minutes before it was struck.

Obituary.

Died, at Linden, Fauquier County, Va., May the 17th, 1890 of Bright's disease of the kidneys, William B. Gatewood aged 43 years and 10 months. He was born at Mountain Grove Bath Co., Va., and was a son of the late Sam'l V. Gatewood, and brother of Col. A. C. L. Gatewood, of Big Spring in this county.

Mr. Gatewood married Miss Mary DeBetta, of Fauquier Co., Va., who is left a widow with four children—two girls and two boys. He was a kind and affectionate husband and father, and one of the best of neighbors. For more than twenty years, he was in the employ of the Va. Midland and Danville Railroad, as general live stock agent and was regarded as one of the best agents in their company. The large concourse of neighbors and railroad officials that attended his funeral as well as the large number of telegrams condolence and sympathy that were received by his sorrowing widow, as soon as the news of his death ran over the wires, were evidence of his standing as a citizen. He was a member of the church, but he was one of those who lived more by the spirit than by the letter.

Committee Meeting.

The Democratic Executive Committee of Pocahontas County will meet at Huntersville on Monday, June 16th, 1890. It is hoped that every member will be present.

C. F. MOORE, Chairman.

The General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, now in session at St. Louis, recently elected Dr. Atticus G. Haywood and O. P. Fitzgerald to the Episcopacy. Dr. Haywood has for a long time been looked upon as one of the most advanced thinkers of the Country, while Dr. Fitzgerald has gained an enviable reputation since his promotion to the head of the Nashville Advocate. He is a brilliant talker and charming author. Both men will make able and acceptable Bishops.

—It is said the members of the "Bath Squadron" contemplate a reunion at the Warm Springs, in Bath Co., on the 4th of July. Several of our Pocahontas citizens belonged to the Squadron.

Mr. McKinley offered an amendment to the tariff bill increasing the duty on lamp chimneys, which was adopted. Probably this is to prevent the poor workingman from spending his wages in reading Democratic newspapers.

The Democratic Executive Committee will meet at Hinton on the 7th day of June, to perfect a plan of action for the party in the Third District.

WOLF'S ACME Blacking
WATERPROOF, SOFT,

THE ROMANCE OF A FLOOD.

BY HARRIET F. CROCKER.

They had parted coldly.

Richard Holmes had walked rapidly up the street to his boarding place with a white face, sternly set lips, his hands clasped tightly behind him, and his whole frame quivering with wounded pride and keen disappointment.

Eloise Ellison had turned her pretty face homeward with a proud little toss and a look of something like triumph in her coquettish dark eyes.

That she was a spoiled and petted beauty, every one in the village knew and that she was as willful and capricious and exacting as she was bright and pretty and bewitching, every one knew as well. The only child of the wealthy mill-owner, from her infancy indulged in her every wish and flattered upon by admiring friends, it was no wonder that she was, when she chose to be, a most tyrannical specimen of young womanhood.

She had chosen to be such the afternoon she met Richard Holmes her father's bookkeeper, on the street, and allowed him to turn and walk beside her. It was raining, and she graciously closed her own elegant little umbrella to share the larger one he carried.

They had gone on together enjoying the rain, laughing and chatting gayly, gossiping in their light way about this and that happening in the social life of the village.

Perhaps he had chosen an inauspicious moment to declare his love and offer her his hand, but, inauspicious or not, he had spoken and received his answer.

They had exchanged a few hot words and then parted in a sudden fright which seized them both.

She had added each scorn and disdain to her refusal that it was more than he could bear in silence. She had even insinuated to him that it was not herself he loved, but her father's wealth. She had wounded him cruelly and intentionally, and he had left her suddenly with a cold adieu.

Eloise raised her own umbrella with a defiant little laugh, and a glance at the retreating figure, and then turned homeward humming a fragment of the latest opera.

Her father's bookkeeper! Presumptuous to offer her his hand! It was absurd!

Thus she communed with her self as she went on up the street to her home. She tried to be angry at the presumption of the man, but in spite of herself she could not. She had always admired him—yes, in a way she had quite liked him and it was pleasing to her vanity to know he loved her; but marriage—that was another thing, indeed, and quite out of the question.

For days and days it rained. It grew monotonous and wearisome. Eloise, wandering aimlessly about the drawing room looking over a book abstractedly; striking a few chords on the piano; going from window to window to look out at the falling rain and the dismal landscape was wretchedly homesick and all of a fever.

Who, did not seem one could even Richard Holmes would be a welcome visitor if only to quarrel with. He used to drop in so often to play a game of chess or listen to him! It had never occurred to her to say that. She wished she had been less unkind that day—wished she had held him off a little longer at least—it used to be so pleasant to have him drop in for an hour or two.

The day was closing in dark and stormy. Eloise from the window looked at the swollen river, and the pools that stood here and there on the lawn.

Suddenly she stood erect, and looked eagerly at a well-known figure coming toward the house. It was Richard Holmes.

The girl stood watching his progress eagerly, as he picked his way among the pools of water, her lips parted, her pretty head thrown back, her dark eyes glad and bright.

"I am glad he is coming," she said, softly to herself, as she stood, surrounded by the creamy draperies of the window, waiting for him.

She heard his firm step on the piazza. She heard him ring the bell, and then speak a few words to the maid who opened the door.

Suddenly a great roar filled all the air, drowning the voices in the hall drowning the silvery chime of the little French clock, drowning everything, swallowing up everything in its awful volume of sound.

There was a terror in it unlike the heaviest crash of thunder—a strange and terrible menace in the sound, swelling and growing louder every moment.

Eloise stood paralyzed with fear. She was powerless to cry out, to move herself; she could only stand and listen to that awful, all pervading roar.

She did not think what it might mean. She had heard vague rumors of fears for the great dam above, but had not heeded.

In a moment it was all over; the sound had come upon her in all its awfulness. She fell back, overpowered with terror, and became unconscious.

A violent blow on her head roused her to herself. She found herself floating on the strong current, borne along at a sickening speed, upheld by the strength and fury of the roaring waters.

Near her she saw the great elm tree that stood before her house ever since she was a child. It must have been a branch of that which struck her and brought her back to life.

With great, dark eyes dilated with horror, and a face white and ghastly as the faces of the dead, the girl flew along. She had caught hold of the branches of the great tree, and was clinging with a grasp like death itself. Life was sweet—too sweet to lose. In her first moment of consciousness she had thought of Richard Holmes. Where could he be? Drowned? O, God forbid—not drowned—the thought was dreadful to her. In a flash she was revealed to herself. She loved him—loved him with her whole heart—had loved him all the time without knowing it. What had he come to the door for that night—it seemed ages ago to her now—to bring a message of warning? Her father—was he safe? O, Heaven! that appalling darkness—that dreadful roar of rushing waters!

She raised her voice and called: "Richard!" It was lost in the roar of the flood. She tried again, summoning all her strength, and sending her clear voice out over the wa-might be somewhere near her now.

She raised her voice again and called his name with a desperation born of fear and love. A dark object was floating near her, tossing up and down on the resistless current. She could see that it was a man clinging to a mass of boards. The face was turned from her, but the head was familiar. She called again, and the man turned and looked at her.

"Is it you, Eloise?" he screamed; and then she barely heard him—"you, Eloise! Thank God!"

She breathed a sigh of relief. She felt safe now—safe, even on the bosom of this rushing ocean of fierce waters and crushing debris—if he were near.

She saw that he was trying to get to her, but could not; that he dared not loose his hold of the boards and trust himself one instant in that mighty current. She could see his face, white and agonized, turned to her—always turned to her. Something had struck him, and cut a gash in his head, and the blood was trickling down his pallid cheek; she could see it from where she clung in the branches of the elm tree.

She did not know that one beautiful, white arm was bare, bleeding from a cruel blow she had received—she did not realize the pain in her head where the tree had struck her—such things were trivial now. Life was the only thing to be thought of—life and death—if death should come.

A house came reeling down and struck the mass of boards to which Richard clung. The shock loosened his hold and tossed him far out in the water. The horrible undercurrent snaked him in and he sank from sight. The next moment his white face showed above the water. Such horror and despair Eloise had never seen as she saw there. One last appealing look at her, one cry from his white lips, and he was gone again. Eloise prayed—prayed as she had never dreamed of praying before; crying aloud for help and pity in this time of need.

Richard came to the surface again—near her this time. Could she reach him? Only a little nearer—he was half unconscious and could not help himself. She leaned far out over the dark torrent, holding to the tree firmly with one arm and touched him with her hand—caught him by his collar and held his head above the water as they were borne along. She called to him wildly. He heard and understood, made one great effort to seize the branches of the tree, and at last with an almost superhuman strength, drew himself up into the sheltering arms of the old elm.

There he clung with what frail strength was left him; but he was too weak for words. It was no time for speech. The scene was more terrible than any of the images of Dante. Great masses of timbers, that ten minutes before had been houses and homes, came rushing by with shrieking women clinging to them, and little children borne along upon them. Strong men were tossing like egg shells on the waters, and horses and cattle were plunging madly for life among the ruins of great barns that came crashing by. Now and then some wild shriek or unearthly moan would mean the death cry of a human being going down to eternal sleep under the roaring waters.

Eloise and Richard were hurled into the air and fell together clinging to whatever they could find—a door, a fence—anything to keep afloat. At last they climbed to the ridge pole of a house and clung there. All night they floated brained and cut by heavy objects striking them, almost losing their hold many times, but never quite—tossing, plunging, flying with a speed that was terrible.

In the first gray dawn of morning they were rescued. Friendly hands drew them from their perilous position and bore them to a place of safety. There they lay for hours unconscious. The shock had been too great—human endurance had been too sorely tried.

The physicians who dressed their wounds and the nurses who cared for them shook their heads gravely over the young strangers given so mercifully into their hands.

Richard woke to consciousness first, but lay with closed eyes, resting and trying to think why he was there and what had happened.

All at once he heard a voice he knew and loved. It was Eloise, delirious with fever. "Richard," she was saying: "I love you now, I loved you all the time, but I did not know it. Richard did the horrible waters drown you? O, my darling!"

He opened his eyes and looked across the room toward the weak voice lying away into silence. What he saw was Eloise lying on the snowy cot with closed eyes and flushed cheeks—Eloise pitifully thin and changed, but Eloise still, despite the lines of pain on her white brow, left there by the agony of that fatal night.

Richard, looking at her thus, loved her all the better for these marks of sorrow; they made her tenfold dearer to him; their mutual distress had welded together their souls forever.

It was a very quiet, very brief ceremony that made them man and wife. It was no time for merry-making and rejoicing. Death and poverty were everywhere. Her father was among the lost; the servants were missing; many of her friends were gone from human sight forever. She was penniless. The beautiful home was entirely destroyed. Nothing that had been hers remained.

Nothing she had loved in the old days was left her. Nothing! Yes, thank God, her husband—her good, brave Richard! They had gone together through that dreadful night, their paths henceforth through life lay side by side.

Eloise was a changed woman. What had been wrong in her became good. What had been vain and foolish became beautiful and pure. Her whole nature was changed woman. What had been wrong in her became good. What had been vain and foolish became beautiful and pure. Her whole nature was changed—her heart ennobled and uplifted, made sweet and womanly and good.

Charlie Rivers—"And so you will be eight next week, Eloise. Why, you are getting to be quite an old lady."

Flossie—"Yes, I'm getting old much faster than sister May is. She has been twenty three ever since I can remember."

Hughkins—"What kind of jokes does young Tompkins write?"

Huntersville, W. Va.
June 5, 1890.

There are two roads and corners of the masculine heart unknown to widows.

Her second husband formed a habit shortly after the wedding of not coming home until morning at 2 or three o'clock.

...having forgotten his keys, he had to knock. She put her head out of the window and asked: "Who's there?"

"Me," was the ungrammatical reply.

"Oh, at first I thought it was someone else."

And now that man waits at home nightly and would seem to be waiting for someone else to call.

Applicant (to country editor) -- Do you want any help on your paper? Editor -- What experience have you had?

Applicant -- Have been a cowboy for three years and have assisted at a number of hangings.

Editor -- All right; you may go on as critic and also take charge of the poetic department.

Mr. Hawbeck -- You ain't seen my son there, have you?

City Visitor -- Why, no, Very likely boy, but he 'takes after his father.

Mr. Hawbeck -- You bet he does, when he gets riled. Took after me four times 'round the barn this morning 'cause spoke kind 'r irritated to him.

"Frank," said Mable, tenderly, "doesn't it seem ages between Tuesday and Saturday night?"

"Yes, indeed," replied Frank, thoughtfully, "Sometimes it seems as though pay day would never come."

"John," said the minister, "will you take this woman to be your wedded wife?" "Now, here, parson, what's the use of asking questions like that? Why do you suppose I am after a divorce?"

"John," said the young lady, "may be a fine pharisee, as you say, but there is no warmth to her touch."

"Hush!" I guess you didn't hear her play the 'Moonlight Symphony'."

"John" -- "No, but I squeezed her hand."

Hardbake -- "I hear that chap Dryson is somewhat of an inventor."

Smurleigh -- "Yes."

Hardbake -- "What's he ever invented?"

Smurleigh -- "Idea."

Guest (to head waiter) -- "Is your name Tide?"

Waiter -- "No, sir."

Guest -- "Or Tide?"

Waiter -- "Not at all."

Guest -- "Well, it ought to be one of them. You wait on no man."

"Well, I got there!" exclaimed Jayamith, announcing a recent success.

"Yes, with all four feet," replied Cumso.

"Johnny, what do you expect to do for a living when you get to be a man?"

"Well, I reckon I'll get married and board with my wife's pa."

"On the fence, there's 'Wilson's Shoe Store.'"

"Well, if Wilson's Shoe tore, why don't he go and get it mended?"

Mr. Piexo -- "I's gettin' tired ob'd railroad persuasion, gounlemen."

Mr. Ronder -- "So's I. Mr. Rates -- What's yo' magnates a-growin' 'bout?"

Mr. Piexo -- "A feller on d' train comin, down gav me a qualter wiv a hole into it, an' when I kicked, he took back'd qualter, an' told me't use d' hole fer to burry myself in."

hous of feet of white pine lumber and this raw material presents striking inducements to capital for its manufacture, upon the ground, into the various products of which it is capable. The best estimate of the length of time that will enable these mills to saw up the soft woods at either hold or commands, is not under twenty years. Here, also, are located a Planing Mill, of large capacity and steady employment; a Sash and Door Factory; a Canning Factory; a Dressed Meat Company, whose abattoirs can furnish fifty dressed bullocks and over one hundred hogs per day; and to which is annexed a Fertilizer Factory, capacity 10 tons per day; an excellently equipped Foundry and Machine Shop, doing a good business; a Floating Mill, of a capacity of fifty barrels per day; a Bank; a Loan and Building Association; two Hotels; a Wagon and Buggy Factory; a Cigar Factory; a Planing Factory; a Brick Yard; a Newspaper and Printing Office; and numerous stores and shops. It already commands most of the trade of Greenbrier county, and a large part of that of Pocahontas and Monroe counties, and on each side, and contributing to it, is one of the finest agricultural sections of the State. It is situated at the point where the Greenbrier river first touches the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, and by its situation must command the manufacturing point of the large quantities of ected of which may be built. Along this stream and its tributaries lie the white pine forests whose product is sawed at this point, while millions of feet of hemlock, spruce, poplar, ash white oak hickory and various hard woods also lie along these streams, and can find no other outlet than at this place. The establishment of paper and pulp mills at this point, to utilize the hemlock and spruce timber above mentioned, and other soft woods, may be regarded as a fixed fact, and it is confidently expected that these alone will double the population of the town in a few years. The Company has so far proceeded in its negotiations for a Spoke and Hub factory that it expects to announce it as an established fact in a short time. It is also negotiating for the establishment of a Furniture Factory with the highest assurances of success. HARD WOODS. The hard woods along these streams have scarcely been touched. Oak of various kinds, and ash and hickory can be had in immense quantities, and a great deal of cherry and some walnut is now brought here for shipment, making the place an exceptionally favorable one for the manufacture of furniture, wagons and agricultural machinery. The hemlock and other barks, and the acidulous woods which can be easily reached from this point, make it a desirable one at which to engage in the tanning of hides and the production of the various of hides the Dressed Meat Company can largely contribute. COAL AND IRON. In the western part of the county lie immense bodies of semi-bituminous coking coal, of the same character as the famous New River and Flat Top coals. A railroad has been chartered to run from Ronceverte to these coal fields, and its projectors have pledged themselves to an early commencement of the work of construction. The importance of this work to the country at large is enlisting for it the active and moneyed support of its people, and Ronceverte, as the point of junction with the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, is bound to feel its beneficial influence. In the eastern part of the county, brown hematite ores of unusual richness underlie a wide area of territory, from which there is an unobstructed down grade to this place. But independently of these advantages, the town lies at the foot of the western slope of the Alleghenies, only a short distance from the New River coking fields, from which there is an easy grade to this point, and from the iron fields of Allegheny. Rockbridge and Craig there is a run, at either a low or down grade, of only a few hours, thus enabling the coke and iron to be brought together here at a less cost than at any other point on the C. & O. Railway, while all around the town there crops out the celebrated limestone of the Greenbrier Valley. But few places, therefore, are so well situated for rolling mills. In addition to this there are undeveloped iron deposits all around the town, and veins of carbonate ores come within a few hundred yards of it. The immense refuse of the St. Lawrence Mills, now burnt to be gotten rid of, and other charcoal woods in close proximity, offer, it is thought, a rare opportunity for making charcoal iron of the best grade at a low cost; and it is the purpose of the company to give early attention to these opportunities. BUILDING STONE. Fine Veins of brown sandstone crop out in the hills overlooking the town, and on the lands secured by the company is an excellent quarry of grey sandstone, admirably adapted to building purposes. Springs of water, sufficient for ordinary manufacturing purposes, run through these lands, and the reserved sites on the Greenbrier river command the immense water power of that stream. HEALTH. The healthfulness of the place is excellent, the altitude being 1700 feet above the sea; and various sulphur, alum and chalybeate springs, of great curative virtue, lie within the immediate vicinity, while the celebrated White Sulphur Springs is only ten miles distant.

First Auction Sale of Lots

IN THE TOWN OF

Ronceverte, Greenbrier County, West Virginia.,

LOCATED ON THE CHESAPEAKE & OHIO RAILROAD.

ON FRIDAY, JULY 4TH, 1890!

EIGHT HUNDRED LOTS of the standard size of 50x100 feet. But only 200 business and residence Lots, situated in the business centre of the town, and the residue within a short distance thereof, will be offered at this sale.

NO OLD FIELDS OFFERED

where a town is expected to be built; but property within the limits of a NEW and GROWING TOWN of 1,500 inhabitants, with Manufacturing plants established and at work, employing a half a million of capital and 300 hands; and with other Manufacturing Plants now under way.

A Lot 25x100 Feet in Size Donated to holder of every Share or fully paid-up Stock of Series A, of which 200 Shares are offered at par, ($100 per Share,) payable ten per cent. Cash and balance in monthly instalments of ten per cent.

TERMS OF SALE OF THE TWO HUNDRED LOTS.

One-third CASH, and the balance in six and twelve months. Deferred installments may be paid in the Stock of the Company, Series A at par and Series B at fifty cents on the dollar.

LANDS ACQUIRED.

The Company has acquired a very valuable body of land lying within and immediately around the town of Ronceverte, consisting of the entire holding of the Ronceverte Improvement Company, and embracing an area of 500 lots of the standard size of 50x100 feet. It is also negotiating for the purchase of other property, which will add to the importance and value of its holdings. The land already acquired has been laid off into building and residence lots and manufacturing sites.

It will be the purpose of the Company to reserve its manufacturing sites for its own manufactories and such as they may be found to be established, and to reserve its business and residence lots as fast as the development of its enterprises may render expedient.

RONCEVERTE.

Ronceverte is not a paper town, and its development is not dependent upon the skillful engineering of an artificial boom. It already has a population of over fifteen hundred souls, and its growth, of only a few years, has been upon a substantial and enduring basis. It also possesses important manufacturing industries, and the proprietors of this Company can point to these ESTABLISHED and growing enterprises they hope to establish.

MANUFACTURING PLANTS ETC.

Here are located the great mills of the St. Lawrence Boom and Manufacturing Company, which saw annually over twenty-five millions of feet of white pine lumber and this raw material presents striking inducements to capital for its manufacture, upon the ground, into the various products of which it is capable. The best estimate of the length of time that will enable these mills to saw up the soft woods it either hold or commands, is not under twenty years. Here, also, are located a Planing Mill, of large capacity and steady employment; a Sash and Door Factory; a Canning Factory; a Dressed Meat Company, whose abattoirs can furnish fifty dressed bullocks and over one hundred hogs per day, and to which is annexed a Fertilizer Factory, capacity 10 tons per day; an excellently equipped Foundry and Machine Shop, doing a good business; a Planing Mill, of a capacity of fifty barrels per day; a Bank; Loan and Building Association; two Hotels; a Wagon and Buggy Factory; a Cigar Factory; a Plastering Factory; a Brick Yard; a Newspaper and Printing Office; and numerous stores and shops. It already commands most of the trade of Greenbrier county, and a large part of that of Pocahontas and Monroe counties, and on each side, and contributing to it, is one of the finest agricultural sections of the State. It is situated at the point where the Greenbrier river first touches the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, and by its situation must remain the manufacturing point of the large quantities of which are brought down the Greenbrier river, and which cannot be diverted by any railroad now projected or which may be built. Along this stream and its tributaries lie the white pine forests whose product is sawed at this point, while millions of feet of hemlock, spruce, poplar, ash white oak hickory and various hard woods also lie along these streams, and can find no other outlet than at this place.

The establishment of paper and pulp mills at this point, to utilize the hemlock and spruce timber, above mentioned, and other soft woods, may be regarded as a fixed fact, and it is confidently expected that these alone will double the population of the town in a few years. The Company has so far proceeded in its negotiations for a Spoke and Hub factory that it expects to announce it as an established fact in a short time. It is also negotiating for the establishment of a Furniture Factory with the highest assurances of success.

HARD WOODS.

The hard woods along these streams have scarcely been touched. Oak of various kinds, and ash and hickory can be had in immense quantities, and a great deal of cherry and some walnut is now brought here for shipment, making the place an exceptionally favorable one for the manufacture of furniture, wagons and agricultural machinery. The hemlock and other barks, and the verdurous woods which can be easily reached from this point, make it a desirable one at which to engage in the tanning of hides and the production of the various preparations of tannin used in that business and in the arts. In the hides the Dressed Meat Company can largely contribute.

COAL AND IRON.

In the western part of the county lie immense bodies of semi-bituminous coking coal, of the same character as the famous New River and Flat Top coals. A railroad has been chartered to run from Ronceverte to these coal fields, and its projectors have pledged themselves to an early commencement of the work of construction. The importance of this work to the country at large is enlisting for it the active and moneyed support of its people, and Ronceverte, as the point of junction with the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, is bound to feel its beneficial influence.

In the eastern part of the county, brown hematite ores of unusual richness underlie a wide area of territory, from which there is an unobstructed down grade to this place.

But independently of these advantages, the town lies at the foot of the western slope of the Alleghenies, only a short distance from the New River coking fields, from which there is an easy grade to this point, and from the iron fields of Allegheny, Rockbridge and Craig there is a run, at either a low or down grade, of only a few hours, thus enabling the coke and iron to be brought together here at a less cost than at any other point on the C. & O. Railway, where all around the town there crops out the celebrated limestone of the Greenbrier Valley. But few places, therefore, present such favorable conditions for the establishment of furnaces and rolling mills. In addition to this there are undeveloped iron deposits all around the town, and veins of carbonate ores come within a few hundred yards of it.

The immense refuse of the St. Lawrence Mills, now burnt to be gotten rid of, and other charcoal woods in close proximity, offer, it is thought, a rare opportunity for making charcoal iron of the best grade at a low cost; and it is the purpose of the company to give early attention to these opportunities.

BUILDING STONE.

Fine Veins of brown sandstone crop out in the hills overlooking the town, and on the lands secured by the company is an excellent quarry of grey sandstone, admirably adapted to building purposes. Springs of water, sufficient for ordinary manufacturing purposes, run through these hills, and the reserved sites on the Greenbrier river command the immense water power of that stream.

HEALTH.

The healthfulness of the place is excellent, the altitude being 1700 feet above the sea; and various sulphur, alum and chalybeate springs, of great curative value, lie within the immediate vicinity, while the celebrated White Sulphur Springs is only ten miles distant.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

—Don't fail to hear ex-Gov. Wilson, when he speaks at the Court on a recent Monday.

—Remember the meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee called by the Chairman for next Monday. It is important that the members attend.

—Read Mr. Ames Harlow's ad. in this issue, and then go to his store and get the best bargain you have ever had in your life.

—On Tuesday, the 10th inst., S. L. Gibson, Geo. S. McNeel, Wm. Cook, H. M. Lockridge and J. C. Arbogast, who were appointed commissioners by the Circuit Court, met in Huntersville to assess the damages sustained by Wm. Curry and others on account of the new road and bridge proposed to be built opposite town. The County Court was represented by the Prosecuting Attorney, L. M. McClintic, and C. F. Moore appeared in behalf of Mr. Curry. The Commissioners proceeded to view the ground and to hear evidence introduced by the defendants; whereupon they made their report, allowing Mrs. Elizabeth McLaughlin $20.00 the trustees of the graveyard $20.00 and Wm. Curry $250. Inasmuch as these sums are larger than the sums offered by the County Court, the Court will have to pay the costs of the proceedings.

Edray Items

N. A. Williams & son are holding forth here preserving youthful beauty and doing it well.

Mess. S. B. and G. P. Moore are back from Green Bank, and report that they had a very pleasant time at the Musical Association held there last Friday and Saturday.

Mr. J. T. Black is in this district looking after the work and interests of a Farmer's Alliance for this vicinity.

This county cannot and will not "shoom" until land owners show a different disposition from that now prevailing. The damages claimed are too high, when private property is to be dedicated to public use, and when mechanics want a lot more can be had for love or cash, about our villages.

Marlinton Pickings.

The pleasant and commodious home of John Ponge, Esq., near Ponge's Lane was consumed by fire Friday night May 30th. The inmates barely escaped with their lives. Very little of the furniture was saved. Mr. Ponge had just returned from marketing his wool and most of the family supplies were consumed along with fifty dollars in money. The fire is believed to be of incendiary origin, as there seems to be no other way to account for it, that is satisfactory. Loss about $1,200.

Mr. Kenny Moore a very worthy young man of this vicinity was seriously injured in Webster Co., a week or two since. He was occupied in driving logs, and in the attempt to break a jam, his leg was crushed in two places the intermediate bone splitting from fracture to fracture. Soon after this, he was seized with mumps and his jaws are troubling his friends as to the result of this combination of ills.

J. K. S.

for the organ at Green Bank $20.00 and for the organ at Dunmore $7.00. They never stand back for a good cause.

The Musical Association was largely attended and well represented. We expect a big boom in singing this summer, and hope that all may take part in the good work.

Singing every Wednesday night at Dunmore, conducted by Prof. J. A. Taylor, every Thursday night at Green Bank, conducted by Prof. G. D. Oliver and every Sunday at 2 p. m., at X Roads School house, conducted by Prof. C. B. Swecker, assisted by Miss Alice Rayburn, also singing at the upper end of the county conducted by Profs. O. W. Ruckman and C. C. Arbogast.

Our merchant Mr. R. L. Nottingham will have two wagons this week, with goods.

"Uncle" Sam Sutton as he is called by all who know him, has a heifer 13 months old that has been giving milk every since she was 9 months old. She is a natural milk-er.

Several rattlesnakes have been killed this hot weather.

There were 46 scholars enrolled at the Sunday school at X Roads last Sunday evening.

Everybody should go to Huntersville next Monday to hear ex-Governor Wilson speak.

Auctioneer Swecker will attend court next week.

A Farmer's Alliance At Locust.

A number of citizens of Locust W. Va., Pocahontas County assembled at the Droop school house on the 5th day of June, 1890, for the purpose of discussing the propriety of organizing themselves together as a body known as the Farmer's Alliance.

On motion Mr. Thomas F. Callison was elected temporary chairman and Edwin L. Beard Sec'y pro tem. The Chairman called upon Mr. J. T. Black the agent for the State of W. Va., to explain the object of the meeting which he did in a very able and satisfactory manner, after which Mr. Henry N. Hannah was elected Treasurer pro tem.

There being nineteen male members enrolled—a sufficient number present—were organized into an alliance to be known as Locust Alliance. Whereupon the following officers were duly elected:

Edwin L. Beard, Pres.; Richard Callison, Vice-Pres.; Henry N. Hannah, Secy.; Wm. H. Callison, Treasurer; Thos. F. Callison, Lecturer; Jacob W. Beard, Asst. Lecturer; Mason Williams, Door-keeper; Jonathan Cochran, Serg't-at-Arms; Business Agent, —.

On motion Thos. F. Callison and L. S. Cochran, were elected delegates to attend the organization of the County alliance of Huntersville on June 21st, 1890.

EWING L. BEARD, Sec'y pro tem.

COMMENCEMENTS.

The Hillsboro Training School and M. & F. Academy.

The third annual Commencement of the Hillsboro Training school, conducted by the Misses Shearer, took place last Thursday night in the presence of one of the largest audiences ever assembled in Hillsboro.

The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Christopher Sydenstricker followed by a number of excellent Recitations, Declamations and many things too numerous to mention separately.

Among the best things of the evening were a Declaration "False and True Glory," by Mr. Jasper Audridge, "The Ball Drill," by 16 boys and girls, "Sustaining Things III," rec. by Miss Jennie Golden and Master Marshall Isabel, "A Name," a speech by Mr. Nerval Clark "The Last Hunt," a rec. by Miss L. D.

Dentl Red of Huntersville, Armond, dec. by Mr. Gus Eskridge, "Seven living entities claimed a Homer dead Through which a living Homer begged his bread," essay by Miss Addie Williams.

"The May Pole Drill," was another delightful feature of the evening. Eight ribbons were wound around the poles to form checks, and arrows were shot through eight floral triangles, and finally a mark was placed upon the stage and the young lady who hit the centre was to receive a handsome bouquet, which was presented to Miss Lillie Hull, of Edray, she being the only one of the eight who hit the centre. The fair marks men carried bows and arrows hand-somely decked with ribbon.

The address by Rev. C. Sydenstricker was very good, as was acknowledged by hearty applause as he took his seat.

The music on this occasion was very fine and consisted of marches, songs and duets. The National song, a quartette, by Misses Rose and Needa Shearer and Mess. Gus Eskridge and Jasper Audridge, was given up by the large audience to be the best thing of its kind we have ever had here. One and all did justice to their teachers, and showed careful training and fore thought.

THE HILLSBORO M. & F. ACADEMY.

The entertainment given by Prof. Hanklin at the close of the M. & F. Academy, on the evening of May 30th, was also a most enjoyable affair and consisted of many good recitations, declamations, Dialogues, &c. All of the scholars acquitted themselves creditably. Among the things deserving special mention were the declamations by Mess. Winters and Summers McNeel, Clarence Overholt, Willie Wyszong and Frank Hill, and recitation by Miss Sallie Hamilton. The dialogues were all amusing and caused much merriment. All expressed themselves as well pleased. The music was furnished by Misses Mary I. McNeel and Annie Wallace and Mess. G. F. Crummett and Mott Wallace assisted in the singing.

"Why are you fumbling in my overcoat pocket?" he asked, as he glanced from his paper.

"I'm looking for a letter," replied his wife.

"Why, my dear, you don't suppose—"

"No, I don't," she interrupted.

"I'm looking for the one I gave you to mail last week."

Farmer (hiring help at Castle Garden)—"Put, if you want to work for me, I'll give you $25 a month and your board."

Patrick O'Flynn (just landed)—

"Pat, an' is that same the highest rate of wages they be payin' in this country?"

Farmer (sweetly)—"Well, they're paying about $15 a day in Congress."

Patrick—"Thin, begorra, o'ill go to Congress."

Generous to A Fault.

A friend sends us the following story which may be a little gray with the frost of time, though we do not recall seeing in print. We insert it, anyhow, with the thought that "there's nothing new under the sun."

A young gentleman and a young lady were attending a wedding—their own wedding, by the way. After the ceremony was over, the groom, in a business-like manner, asked the minister for a statement of account. The parson told him the law allowed him three dollars. The happy groom said, in a generous tone of voice, handing him a fifty-cent piece: "this, with what the law allows you, will make it three dollars and a half."

Time Works Wonders.

One of our noverant riches, who was desirous of having his father's portrait sketched, went to the painter and made known his desire. The artist asked to see him who was to be painted, but was informed that it was impossible, as the old gentleman had taken up his permanent residence in the cemetery.

"Well, you have a photograph of him, haven't you?" was the next question.

"Gut a photograph of him? Well I guess I wouldn't be a comin' round here to get his portrait painted, but I had a picture of him when he was alive."

At that moment a portrait of Moses that was hanging in the studio caught his eye, and he said: "Who's that?"

"That's a picture of Moses," was the reply.

"Moses? That's the name of the man who was killed by the Lord?"

"That's the name of the man who was killed by the Lord," was the reply.

Save Your Hair

By a timely use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. This preparation has no equal as a dressing. It keeps the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, and preserves the color, fullness, and beauty of the hair.

"I was rapidly becoming bald and gray; but after using two or three bottles of Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair grew thick and glossy and the original color was restored."—Melvin Aldrich, Canaan Centre, N. H.

"Some time ago I lost all my hair in consequence of measles. After due waking, no new growth appeared. I then used Ayer's Hair Vigor and my hair grew."

Thick and Strong.

It has apparently come to stay. The Vigor is evidently a great aid to nature."—J. B. Williams, Florence, Texas.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past four or five years and find it a most satisfactory dressing for the hair. It is all I could desire, being harmless, causing the hair to retain its natural color, and requiring but a small quantity to render the hair easy to arrange."—Mrs. M. A. Bailey, 9 Charles street, Haverhill, Mass.

"I have been using Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years, and believe that it has caused my hair to retain its natural color."—Mrs. H. J. King, Dealer in Dry Goods, &c., Bishopville, Md.

LANDS ACQUIRED

The Company has acquired a very valuable body of land lying within and immediately around the town of Lawrenceville, consisting of the entire holding of the Reconverte Industrial Company, and embracing the present location of the standard wire of Georgia West. It is also negotiating for the purchase of other parcels which will add to the Lawrenceville and West of the hold- ings. The land already acquired has been used for building and erecting and manufacturing plants.

tions of feet of white pine lumber and this raw material presents striking inducements to capital for its manufacture, upon the ground, into the various products of which it is capable. The best estimate of the length of time that will enable these mills to saw up the soft woods at either hold or commands, is not under twenty years. Here, also, are located a Planing Mill, of large capacity and steady employment; a Sash and Door Factory; a Canning Factory; a Dressed Meat Company, whose abattoirs can furnish fifty dressed huddles and over one hundred hogs per day, and which is annexed a Fertilizer Factory, capacity 10 tons per day; an excellently equipped Foundry and Machine Shop, doing a good business; a Planing Mill, of a capacity of 100,000 feet per day; a Sash and Door Factory; a Canning Factory; a Dressed Meat Company, a Planing Mill; a Sash and Door Factory; a Truck Yard; a Lumber Yard and Planing Shop; and a large number of stores and shops. The town is the seat of the trade of the adjacent country, and a large number of the population are engaged in commerce and manufactures.

ported or which may be built. Along this stream and its tributaries lie the white pine forests whose product is sawed at this point, while millions of feet of hemlock, spruce, poplar, ash white oak, hickory and various hard woods also lie along these streams, and can find no other outlet than at this place.

The establishment of paper and pulp mills at this point, to utilize the hemlock and spruce timber above mentioned, and other soft woods, may be regarded as a fixed fact, and it is confidently expected that these alone will double the population of the town in a few years. The Company has so far proceeded in its negotiations for a Spoke and Hub factory that it expects to announce it as an established fact in a short time. It is also negotiating for the establishment of a furniture factory with the highest assurances of success.

HARRIS WOODS

The hard woods, among these are, have so far been reached Oak of various kinds, and ash and hickory can be had in immense quantities, and a great deal of cherone, or white walnut is now brought to the port for shipment, making the place one of the most favorable ones for the manufacture of furniture, wagons and agricultural machinery.
The hickory and other barks, and the acidulous woods which can be easily reached from this point, make it a desirable one at which to engage in the tanning of hides and the production of the various preparations of tannin used in that trade and in the arts. In the of hides the Dressed Meat Company can largely contribute.

COAL AND IRON.

In the western part of the county lie immense bodies of semi-bituminous coking coal, of the same character as the famous New River and Flat Top coals. A railroad has been chartered to run from Rome, west to these coal fields, and its projectors have pledged themselves to an early commencement of the work of construction. The importance of this work to the country at large is enlisting for it the active and moneyed support of its people, and Rome, as the point of junction with the Chesapeake & Ohio railway, is bound to feel its beneficial influence.

In the eastern part of the county, known hennipelle ones of unusual richness underlie a wide area of territory, from which there is an unobstructed down grade to the place.

But independently of these advantages, the town lies at the foot of the western slope of the Alleghenies, only a short distance from the New River coaling fields, from which there is an easy grade to this point, and from the iron fields of Allegheny, Rockbridge and Ohio there is a run, at either a low or down grade, of only a few hours, thus enabling the coke and iron to be brought together here at a less cost than at any other point on the C. & O. Railway, while all around the town there crops out the celebrated limestone of the Greenbrier Valley. But few places, therefore present such favorable conditions for the establishment of furnaces and rolling mills. In addition to this there are undeveloped iron deposits all around the town, and veins of carbonate ores come within a few hundred yards of it.

The immense refuse of the St. Lawrence Mills, now burnt to be gotten rid of, and other charcoal woods in close proximity, offer, it is thought, a rare opportunity for making charcoal iron of the best grade at a low cost: and it is the purpose of the company to give early attention to these opportunities.

BUILDING STONE.

Fine Veins of brown sandstone crop out in the hills overlooking the town, and on the lands secured by the company is an excellent quarry of grey sandstone, admirably adapted to building purposes. Springs of water, sufficient for ordinary manufacturing purposes, run through these lands, and the reserved sites on the Greenfield river command the immense water power of that stream.

HEALTH

The healthfulness of the place is excellent, the altitude being 1700 feet above the sea; and various sulphur, alum and chalybeate springs, of great attractive value, lie within the immediate vicinity, while the celebrated White Sulphur Springs is only ten miles distant.

Huntersville, W. Va.

June 19, 1890.

Ed Van Meter, an educated Sioux Indian has been admitted to practice law before the Dakota circuit courts.

On Sunday last Rev. Sam Jones commenced a series of meetings in Richmond, to be continued three times daily until the 29th inst. The first meetings were attended by from 9,000 to 10,000 people, on each occasion, embracing the best of the citizens of the city.

Preparations are being made to take out a section of the big Red wood for the purpose of exhibition at the World's Fair in 1893. This will be the largest section of any big tree measured ninety feet in circumference and thirty feet in diameter.

The President's wife, Mrs. Harrison, has been presented by a syndicate of friends, with an elegant cottage at Cape May, which she will occupy during the present summer. She is a most accomplished and charming lady, and the gift a recognition of her popularity.

The population of Ireland continues to decline, and appears to have dropped some 50,000 in number during the past year. The lowest point of this present century has now been reached. Its zenith was in 1845, when there were 8,250,000. The estimate for to-day is 3,500,000.

In the year 1700 there was but one newspaper in the United States. In 1870 there were 5,871; this year there are 10,310, and the total for the United States and Canada being 17,107. In 1870 there were but 14,000 periodicals printed in the whole world. Now, however, there are in the United States alone 12,701 weeklies, 1,798 monthlies and 1,484 dailies.

GOV. WILSON AT HUNTERSVILLE.

On Monday last one of the largest audiences that has greeted a public speaker in this county for many years assembled at the court house to hear Gov. Wilson.

The Governor was at his best and held the large audience with marked attention for two hours and a half, and addressed himself particularly to the condition of our farmers and clearly pointed out the remedy for their wrongs. His speech was based on facts and figures that could not be gainsayed, and was so clear and direct that it was a revelation to many of our people.

The Governor's speech was a masterpiece of logic and eloquence, and was a most timely and valuable contribution to the knowledge of our people. It was a most interesting and profitable session, and the Governor's speech was a most timely and valuable contribution to the knowledge of our people.

Democratic Executive Committee.

The Democratic Executive Committee, at its meeting in Huntersville, on Monday last, determined to hold a primary election on the second Tuesday in September for the purpose of selecting a County ticket.

It was also ordered that on Saturday, July 26 a mass meeting be held in each District of the County for the purpose of selecting delegates to the State, Congressional and Senatorial Conventions and also to the joint-convention held by the counties of Pocahontas and Webster for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the legislature. Each District to appoint three delegates to each of the foregoing convention.

The chairman of the Committee was instructed to confer with the executive committee of Webster county, and, if concurred in by said Committee of Webster, to call a joint convention of the two counties to meet at Huntersville on the second Saturday in August for the purpose of nominating a candidate for the Legislature.

Inasmuch as it is conceded that Pocahontas county is entitled to the candidate for the State Senate and for the Legislatures, it is recommended that the delegates from this county to each of these two conventions before going into said conventions determine among themselves who is the county's favorite candidate and enter said convention with but one candidate and thus give the support of the County to the man preferred by the majority.

It was also determined that all persons, whatever their previous party affiliations may have been, shall be allowed to vote at the primary election, provided they pledge themselves to support the nominees of said election when they vote at the general election.

The committee adjourned to meet on call of the Chairman.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

From our regular correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 13.

Hon. Commissioner Baum of the Pension Bureau, is to follow the inglorious retreat of Corporal Tanyer.

A resolution has been filed in the House directing the committee on Invalid Pensions to inquire into charges that have been filed with the President relative to the conduct of the Pension Bureau. The charges against the commissioner are scandalous almost beyond belief to those unacquainted with the process by which pensions are obtained. For one gifted with ordinary intelligence there is no necessity for any lawyer, or mediator, in the prosecution of a pension claim. The blanks showing the evidence required are furnished direct, on application, from the department. There is no occasion for a lawyer unless the applicant is unable to write. The idea of having an attorney here to look after the clients interests is a mistake that brings large returns to the pockets of the so called pension attorneys, but their clients derive benefit for the expense.

To employ an attorney here is simply an additional expense to an applicant for pension, who pays all the law allows for the simple sake of letting the correspondence with the department pass through his attorney's hands. Then it is usually necessary to apply to some Justice of the Peace or poor local lawyer, to have the bill for the attorney's charges paid, and he is usually a most unscrupulous fellow, who will do anything to get his money.

The Washington lawyer did not know the law, and the case was lost. The advantage of the pension law is that it is so simple that any man can get it. The Washington lawyer is a most unscrupulous fellow, who will do anything to get his money.

is thoroughly despised by reputable lawyers, but like the quack doctors, he learned a scheme to make money and flourishes. Tanner dropped on to the trick while he conducted the Pension Bureau, and since his expulsion has been practicing the tricks learned there. In an interview this week in one of the Washington papers, in a ebullition of joy he announced that he had made $100,000 in the last year as pension attorney, and expected his yearly income to soon reach the figure $100,000. This opportunity might be a great temptation to whom it be presented, but the poor ignoramus that pay for it ought to open their eyes. Since his exposure people begin to wonder why the President ever appointed Gen. Baum to the office. At the time he was practically at head of the firm of Green B. Baum & Co., pension attorneys. The other members of the firm, were his sons, John and Green B. Jr. Upon the installment of his father into office Green B., was appointed Chief of the Appointment Division of the Bureau, and John was left in charge of the office where he has continued to do a flourishing business for the firm. He has been furnished in advance with decisions from the department, which he conveyed to his patrons in solicitation of their claims. He has had his cases made special and called out of the regular order at pleasure, with no reason to offer but the inherent prerogative of the firm.

On the night of March 15, 1890, Miss Grace Gindley, of Amboy, Ill., retired for the night as usual. She has been sweetly sleeping ever since. Her breathing is natural; her face retains its fresh beauty and brightness. Medical men at home and abroad have been called to consult over and prescribe for her case, but all to no effect. She was sleeping soundly at last account, with no indication of a change in her condition.

It is stated that the Armour's, the great meat packers and dealers of Chicago, last year killed 1,200,000 hogs, 600,000 cattle and 250,000 sheep—$5,000,000 worth more than during the year previous. They employed 6,000 men, to whom they paid $3,000,000—or an average of $500 a piece for the year, or $1.66 2/3 cents per day. There are several other slaughtering and packing establishments in the West—notably in Chicago and Kansas City—each of which does a large business annually.

HOME NEWS

—C. B. Swecker, Esq., of Dunmore was in to see us this week.

—Rev. J. W. McNeil will conduct services at Mt. Pleasant next Sunday at 4 p.m.

—Quite a number of persons called to see us this week while at court.

—Ex-Gov. E. W. Wilson was in our town from Sunday last at noon until Tuesday afternoon, the guest of C. F. Moore.

—The Emma Barrett and McAlister chancery suit, which was sent back from the Court of Appeals for further proceeding, was again decided in favor of the Plaintiff, Frank Barrett.

—There will be one of the grandest picnics ever in the county on July 4th, in the sugar grove a short distance above Mr. H. M. Lockridge's on Knapp's creek.

—The funeral sermon of the late Mr. Alexander Barlow, will be preached in the Methodist church at Liday at 11 o'clock a. m. the second Sunday in July.

The bald man's motto: "There is no room at the top." This top may be supplied with a good crop of hair by using Hall's Hair Restorer. Try it.

The benefits of vaccination seem to be greatly enhanced, that the same time, the blood is being purified and vitalized by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. A good appetite, bright eyes, and buoyant spirits attend the use of this wonderful medicine.

Next Saturday and Sunday, June 21st and 22nd, the first quarterly meeting of the Huntersville Farmers Alliance will be held at Huntersville. B. E. Church, Secretary, and J. W. Arbuttle, of Lowisburg, Va., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Clark.

The following are the Attorneys attending court here this week from a distance: E. B. Knight, of Charleston, Wm. M. McVester, of Huntersville, and J. H. Stephens, of Warm Springs, Va.; C. P. Jones, Monterey; J. W. Arbuttle, of Lowisburg; Gen. Skenn, of Covington; R. S. Turk, of Staunton.

—On Tuesday the 17th the Huntersville Farmers Alliance was organized with the following temporary officers: M. A. Friel, president; H. T. White, vice pres.; C. R. Moore, secretary; S. P. Curry, treasurer; Wm. F. Ervine, chaplain; H. M. Lockridge, lecturer; Wm. H. Clark, asst. lecturer; Chas. L. Moore, door keeper; C. P. Corbett, asst. door keeper; Geo. Dilley, surgt. at arms. The following persons were appointed delegates to the County Alliance on Saturday, 21st: M. D. McGlaughlin, W. H. Grose, H. T. White and C. R. Moore.

A CARD.

Since announcing myself a candidate for Clerk of the County and Circuit Courts of Pocahontas county, I have ascertained that a majority of the people of this county are in favor of electing two Clerks, and a different person to each office, and not having the same person hold both offices, as at present. Not caring to antagonize the wishes of the people in any way, I have withdrawn as a candidate for Clerk of the Circuit Court and will run for the County Court Clerkship only. This will give me an opportunity to devote my attention to the one office.

Respectfully,
S. L. BROWN.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

Hillaboro Male and Female Academy will be run during the coming session by Prof. C. A. Brown, of Va., assisted by Miss Grace L. Clark, of this county, who has recently graduated at Lowisburg Female Institute. More extensive announcements will appear in THE TIMES in a few weeks.

Death's Greek Items.

Misses Birdie Moore, of Randolph county and Mary Cackley, of Dunmore were visiting Miss Minnie McElwain a few days last week.

Mrs. Henry Hall and daughter Miss Grace are visiting Mrs. Henry Sharp.

B. F. White, of Frost, is home for a few days on business.

Mr. F. M. White, wife, little son and Miss Sallie White, of Mill Point, were visiting at Mr. H. White's a day or two last week.

Miss Sadie Hannah, of Elk is visiting at her grand father's Mr. Henry White.

Hillaboro Locals.

Quite a crowd from Hillaboro and vicinity attended the basket meeting at Swago last Sunday.

Prof. Young and daughter and Miss Maybelle Feamster, of Lewisburg and Miss Nettie Campbell, of Union, Monroe Co., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Clark.

Miss Grace Clark has returned from the Lewisburg Female Institute where she graduated with honors the present session.

Miss Anna Wallace, of Mill Point is visiting friends in Virginia.

Miss G. M. Shaver left for a short visit to Elk, Liday and other places in this county.

Miss Joseph McNeal is visiting her parents in Huntersville.

Miss Mattie Hill, at the time of the writing is very ill with diphtheria.

Mr. Crish and family, of Mill Point, are suffering from measles. The measles have at last made their appearance here from Hillaboro and a great number of persons are reported.

Dr. J. J. Jones and family are visiting relatives in Greenbrier county.

Mrs. Geo. L. Clark has returned from a visit to her parents at Frankford, W. Va.

JAMIMA.

Wayide Notes.

For exquisite loveliness of natural scenery, and promising attractive families, the community associated with Liberty church, near Green Bank cannot be easily surpassed.

An incident of recent and rather rare occurrence anywhere, is worthy of special notice and commendation.

Quite a number of the young people have been interested in repairing and furnishing Liberty Meeting House, just because it was a building devoted to the worship of the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. The young gentlemen, one of them a workman of more than ordinary skill for one so young, met and repaired the vestibule in a very substantial manner, erected spacious upping platforms, and fixed hitching places, giving their labor for days as a free gift.

The young ladies have furnished an organ of superior excellence, a lamp of 324 candle power and renovated the pulpit, and have more improvements in prospect, all too for Christ, no other motive apparent.

Twenty minutes past two o'clock, Monday afternoon, June the 9th, little Clifford, the youngest child of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. L. Brown, was borne away to be with Jesus, who loves him. Though his sufferings were heart-rending to his parents and greatly attached sisters and brothers, still they are greatly sustained by the consolations of Christian faith, so the writer learns from a very touching letter written by his father, "Little did I think, while listening to your sermon last Sunday week, on the death of Mr. and Mrs. Lightner's little one, that we would be so soon called to mourn a similar loss, but such is our lot. Poor little son he was pure, he had no sins to atone for, he needed no preparations, he was prepared to go at any time, so we feel and think."

May the loving Father remember all of the afflicted over in that community, and make them glad according to days wherein He has afflicted them.

County Court vs. Wm. Curry and others to condemn land for public roads, report of the Commissioners confirmed.

A good Story comes from the Pension office at Washington, via the Chicago News: "Some time ago a claimant for a pension submitted an affidavit from a physician at Duluth, testifying to his disability, and to the fact that it was the result of his service during the war. Recently the case came up, when a letter was written to the postmaster of Duluth asking whether the doctor was a regular practitioner and a man of truth and veracity. The reply came in due time, in which the postmaster said that he had spent his entire life with the physician in question, and believed him to be a man of good character. During his youth, unlike George Washington, he had told some falsehoods, but had been soundly whipped for them and had learnt better; therefore in his old age, he was able to stick to facts as well as any citizen. Then he signed his name, which was the same as that of the physician, and it appears that the postmaster and the physician are one and the same person."

The Potter's Field, at Philadelphia, is to give up 6,000 dead bodies to be cremated. Cremation, may not in this generation or the next become the popular mode of disposing of the bodies of the dead, but the day is coming when sanitary consideration will popularize the crematory, and the custom of encumbering the dead become the universal custom.

Miss Poey—You would never be an editor, would you, Lyric.

Lyric Verse—Oh, no; but why do you ask?

Miss Poey—They're are such a coarse, horrid, contemptible set of creatures. Do you know that just after we were engaged, I wrote, to an editor, over an assumed name, of course, and asked him how I could best show my love for you.

L. V.—Well?

Miss P.—Well, the reply came out in the "Answers to Correspondents" column. He said that I might tell my mother she need never show her face 'round our future home.

L. V.—Horror.

Miss Poey—And I might bestow my income unreservedly upon you, and take in sewing to supply my own necessities. Lyric, dear, (with a rising sob,) I used to have ambitions for you, and want you to lead a literary and intellectual life; but now I would rather you should be a butcher than an editor. There's some refinement about butchering.

L. V. (with pent up emotion)—That's so!

A cousin from a Western ranch is visiting the Bellinghams, of Boston.

The Cousin (at lunch)—Then stuffed olives is the most all-fired elegant thing I ever got my teeth into.

Baby Bellingham (aged two, in a whisper)—Mamma, this man is literally dreadful. Suppose any of our friends should see that one of the knife. And if he persists in his criminally ungrammatical language, I am absolutely certain I shall have an attack of nervous prostration.

"What are we waiting on; conductor?" asked a passenger from Chicago, when the train came to a standstill.

"We are waiting on the track," replied the conductor, who was a Boston man.

Chicago Tribune—The railway accident had been a terrible one, and one of the men who were carrying the thirty-seventh victim up the car track, and with strong feeling: "I must have to pay dear for this!"

The stranded passenger opened his eyes and gazed at the speaker. "The company is not to blame," he said calmly. "It is a desperate case of Providence!"

He was the attorney for the railroad.

Rheumatism,

BEING due to the presence of acid in the blood, is most effectively cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and take it till the poison is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony.

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatism, and being unable to walk only with great discomfort, and having tried various remedies, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for about a month, and am pleased to state that I am now completely cured. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, 110 West 12th St., New York.

"One day ago I was taken ill with rheumatism, and was confined to my house six months. I tried out of the dozens very much advertised, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. HOME NEWS

Harvest prospects abroad are favorable.

Our own mowers and reapers ready.

Early mowing is favorable to a second crop of grass.

Early term of the County Court convenes on the second Monday in July.

As a rule, early cut hay is of better quality than late cut, and quality is better than quantity.

Do not be in a hurry to cut grass while the dew is on; it will dry faster while standing.

Begin early in the season and "make hay while the sun shines." This is the best general rule in hay making that can be laid down.

R. L. BROWN.

To the Voters of Pocahontas County.
I hereby announce myself a candidate for the office of Sheriff. Election Nov. 4th, 1890.
Respectfully,
J. C. ARBORENT.

—Changing pastures make fat calves.

—A grand picnic just above Mr. H. M. Lockridge's place at Marlinton on the 4th of July.

—Capt. Geo. Siple, of Green Bank, was in to see us Tuesday.

—Drs. Rod and Mat. Edmiston, of Weston, were visiting Mr. J. J. Howard's family last week.

—Candidates were both numerous and very polite, during Court last week.

—The thermometer has been standing at from 90 to 95 degrees in the shade for several days.

—Attorney C. F. Moore and brother Harry, are attending the sale of lots at Clinch Forge, Va., this week.

—Very heavy rain and hail storm passed over Brown's creek, about three or four miles from Huntersville, Tuesday, doing considerable damage to growing crops &c.

—Don't forget the picnics. One at Marlinton and one about 4 miles above Huntersville in Mr. Wm. H. Cleek's sugar grove, the 4th of July.

—One hundred good white envelopes, post paid to any address on receipt of 25 cents, at THE TIMES office.

—Mrs. Jones hasn't a gray hair in her head and is over 50. She looks as young as her daughter. The secret of it is, that she uses only Hall's Hair Renewer.

—Huntersville Division, Sons, of Temperance, will meet at the usual place, next Saturday evening, June 28th.

—Bishop Geo. W. Peterkin, will preach on the 13th of July at Clover Lick, at 11 a. m.; at Huntersville, at 8 p. m. and at Academy, on the 14th at 8 p. m.

—SAVED.—A fine family of children were all afflicted with scrofula. Two died early; the rest would soon have followed, but for the timely and preserving use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which built them up into a healthy and vigorous manhood.

—Mr. L. B. Phillips, of Buckhannon, this State, is selling the Stuart force pump in this County, and as far as we have heard, is pronounced by the people who are trying them to be the best pump in existence. He put one in our town well, and we believe it cannot be excelled in quality, durability and excellence.

—You can never know till you try, how quickly a dose of Ayer's Pills will cure your sick headache. Your stomach and bowels need cleansing, and these pills will accomplish it more effectively and comfortably than any other medicine you can find.

—The annual Children's Day services of the Huntersville Southern Methodist Sunday school, will be conducted next Sunday at 9:30 a. m. A nice programme of songs, recitations and class exercises will be issued. The church will be decorated and everything arranged to make the services interesting. A collection for the benefit of needy Sunday school will be taken.

—There will be on the 4th of July a grand picnic in the sugar grove on Knapp's creek about four miles from Huntersville near Mr. H. M. Lockridge's. A large dancing platform will be erected for the occasion, also a large tent. Everybody are invited to attend. Refreshments will be served on the ground. Also we had received a large quantity of fruit and candy which will be charged for on the grounds.

Notice is hereby given that the election for the office of Sheriff of Pocahontas County, will be held on the 4th day of November next, and if elected, I pledge my self to discharge the duties of said office to the best of my ability.

—The Second Quarterly meeting of Pocahontas Circuit M. E. Church, will be held at Bush Run in a grove three miles south of Travelers Rest on the first Saturday and Sunday in July. Preaching Saturday 11 a. m. P. E. C., M. Neff; meeting of the Quarterly Conference just after preaching; Love Fast, Sunday, at 9 a. m., and preaching and Sacramental services at 11 a. m. Dinner on the ground. Preaching at 2 p. m., after which there will be some persons baptised by immersion.

Attention Republicans.

At a meeting of the Republican Executive Committee of Pocahontas County held in Huntersville, on 10th day of June 1890, it was ordered, upon vote of said Committee, that the Republicans of Pocahontas County be requested to meet in convention at Huntersville, on Tuesday, July 8th, 1890, at 1 o'clock p. m. for the purpose of electing delegates to the Congressional Convention, to be held at Hinton, on 21st day of August next; to elect delegates to the Senatorial Convention; to elect a County Executive Committee, and to transact such other business as the convention may deem proper.

It is the desire of the Committee that there be a full attendance from all parts of the County at Huntersville, on July 8th.

S. B. MOORE, Chairman.
H. S. RUCKER, Secretary.

Dunmore Dologs.

Arthur Beard, son of Josiah Beard, was killed by lightning at his home, near Green Bank, last Saturday, aged 12 years. While in the field sowing buckwheat the storm came up, and he was told by his brother who was with him to shelter under an oak tree, which he did, and in a few moments his brother heard the peal of thunder and looked to see his brother fall a lifeless corpse at the foot of the tree. An other example that impresses forcibly upon our mind that "in the midst of life we are in death." The bereaved family have the sympathy of all who know them.

Prayer meeting at X roads school house next Sunday at 2 p. m.

Misses Alice and Lena McGlaughlin and Capt. C. B. Swecker, while driving Sunday, let their team run away, throwing them out and smashing the carriage to a considerable extent. Fortunately no one was hurt. The team ran about two miles.

Harry Moore, Esq., is at Clifton Forge, Va., this week.

Miss Mattie Smith is at Ronceverte this week.

W. C. Mann, Esq., and wife, of Edray, are here on a visit.

The County Farmers Alliance is booming.

Some person or persons tore up the culverts between John Wanless' and McEntee's last Sunday. Suppose the next grand jury will look after the matter.

Wayside Notes.

Thursday the 8th of June, 1890, was spent by the writer in the vicinity of Split Rock. It was a day of surpassing loveliness and the scenery around the famous Big Spring and its contiguous valleys, unrivalled for forest charms, never appeared to better advantage.

The occasion of this pleasant visit, was the marriage of Miss Emma N. McCalpin and Mr. John A. Stuart, to be celebrated at the home of James H. McCalpin Esq. Promptly at 2 o'clock, p. m. the bridal party appeared on the floor, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends, when the vows were pronounced by Wm. I. Price, a Methodist minister.

The bride and groom, were Messrs. McCalpin and Stuart, and the bridesmaids, Messrs. McCalpin and Stuart, and the groomsmen, Messrs. McCalpin and Stuart.

A varied and beautiful repast was served up. More than fifty persons partook of the good cheer and all passed off in a very becoming manner. Dinner over, the remainder of the sunny afternoon was spent by the young people in a pleasant walk through the green meadows to the store and picture gallery, while others formed part of the audience addressed by an agent of the Farmer's Alliance.

These young persons have a great many friends to wish their long continued happiness, in the relation so auspiciously entered upon.

ICURE FITS!

When I was a boy I was afflicted with fits, and I have since been cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS FOR PALE PEOPLE.

FOR MEN ONLY!

FRANK SLOCUM'S BOOL

There was not a more living sea-port city in the south in 1860 than Apalachicola Fla. Railroads were not near so plentiful as they are now, and a large amount of the cotton grown in Georgia and Alabama was carried down the Chattahoochee by the eighteen magnificent steamers then plying its murky waters.

It was my custom to visit this pretty little city every winter and shoot ducks at Lake Shipley. It was on my annual trip in the year above named that I met and became fondly attached to Frank Slocum. Like myself he was fond of sport and we spent many pleasant days together on the bay or among the numerous little streams that enter it.

Frank was purser on one of the river steamers and one of the handsomest young men I ever knew and equally as noble as he was handsome. During our intimacy he had confided in me and I learned that his whole soul was wrapped up in Grace Brown, the lovely daughter of a rich cotton merchant.

From what I could learn the match would prove a most acceptable one. Frank had energy and brains, while the girl was beautiful and wealthy—a good combination I thought.

I had never met Miss Brown but once and must confess that in her steel blue eyes appeared something that made me feel a little uncomfortable in her presence. She did not appear cruel or heartless, but there was to my mind a selfish expression about them that was entirely different from Frank's honest, brown eyes.

The time for the marriage was set for the following May, and as each day passed by Frank became more and more impatient for the winter season to close.

One beautiful Sabbath evening that new and fast mail steamer, the John C. Calhoun, turned her head upstream with the United States mail. Thousands of handkerchiefs waved from the wharves as she steamed swiftly by on her maiden trip up the river. She was in command of the gallant Captain Crawford, and Frank Slocum stood at the desk in the purser's office. The Calhoun was by odds the swiftest and handsomest craft that ever plied the Chattahoochee, and was the pride of the city. Little did the thousands who waved her adieu on this occasion think that it would be a final one.

The Monday following was a dark day for Apalachicola. The steamer, Wave had arrived from up the river and brought the startling and horrible intelligence that the Calhoun had been blown up by an explosion of its boilers and that the gallant Captain Crawford and thirteen other persons had been killed.

The report proved only too true, and a sad and terrible catastrophe had occurred. A hundred feet of the hull of the Calhoun had been blown up by an explosion of its boilers and that the gallant Captain Crawford and thirteen other persons had been killed.

quire about him but never ventured to call until one evening when Frank was able to sit up, I wrote her a note and begged her to look upon him if only for a moment, as it would do the poor fellow so much good. She came accompanied, by a servant, but as soon as she got one glance at my poor friend's scarred face, turned deadly white and without uttering a word left the room, while Frank, with out stretched hands, sobbed as if his heart would break.

In a few days I left for Georgia, bringing Frank with me. It was several months before he fully recovered, but the dark and cruel marks on his face told a tale of horror that was heart rending.

He never alluded to Grace Brown again, but once in speaking to me of his experience during the explosion said:

"When I was thrown violently through the hurricane deck my prayer was that I might not fall on the burning boat and might be spared to live. Had I known what I have since learned, this is the very thing I would have prayed for."

The ports had been closed and troops were hurrying in every direction to the front. Frank and I were among the first to volunteer and with the Georgia took part in the first battle of Manassas. The rash bravery here displayed by my young friend won the plaudits of his comrades and officers, but as they bore him from the field mortally wounded I knew it to be a willing sacrifice, for Frank did not think life worth living.

Time had wrought its changes and in ten years afterward, as I strolled along the desolate wharves of Apalachicola I felt sick at heart to compare the city of 1860 with that of 1870. The commerce of the town had been destroyed, and none of its former thrift and prosperity seemed visible. As I leaned lazily against a weather-beaten anchor an old sailor approached; I beckoned to him and tendering him a cigar, engaged him in conversation. He told me much as to the hardships of the people whom I had once known. Finally I asked him about the Browns.

"Come with me," he said. We walked to the lower end of the wharves where is located a miserable lot of little shanties extending over the water. The old sailor stopped in front of one of these and pointed to the door.

In this miserable abode sat a decrepit, dirty, haggard woman, fearfully scarred with small-pox, surrounded by four or five ragged children, all of them engaged in struggling life.

That woman was Grace Brown!

THE TRAMP KITTEN

BY HELEN F. CLARA.

"I hate cats," said Ted. "So do I," echoed Frank Tibbals. "There goes one now!" screamed Joe Walters, and catching up a stone from the edge of the pavement he flung it at the timid little creature crouching behind a door-step across the street.

"I say, Joe, that cat's not hurting you. Why can't you let it alone?" said Fred Raymond.

"When did you turn baby?" sneered Joe tantalizingly. "I'm going to have another shy at it," and reached for a second stone.

Fred stood irresolute, while the stone sped swiftly across the street. The aim was all too true, for the sharp pebble struck the poor cat's leg, and, with a pitiful cry of pain, she sprang into the air and then fell helplessly back on the pavement.

"You brute!" exclaimed Fred in his anger, and no longer a coward, he dashed across and lifted the mewling cat into his arms.

"What are you going to do with her, Fred?" asked Frank.

"Take her home. I guess mother won't care."

Joe laughed and sneered again, calling him a "baby" and "girl-boy," but Fred walked bravely on to his own home and rang the bell at the basement door.

"O Fred, we don't want any cats. There's plenty of them out in the back yard," said cook quickly.

"Never mind, Mary, this cat's hurt. I think mother will let her lie in the kitchen till she gets well, and then she can go away again."

Mrs. Raymond came down to see the cat. She wasn't a very attractive specimen of the cat family, for she was long and lank, and so thin that cook declared you could "count the bones." Then, too, she was far from clean, and so timid that she would run at least noise, and try to escape from even a kindly hand. Mrs. Raymond bathed the swelling joint with arnica, and then carefully bandaged it, while Fred made her a bed in an old basket, and put her in a warm corner by the range, and went back to his play with a light heart.

The boys still teased him about the cat, but he bore it patiently and stuck to his purpose of being kind to animals.

The secret of it all was that Fred's Sunday school teacher had talked very earnestly to his class on the previous Sunday about being kind to God's defenceless creatures, and had told them about the little sparrows that never fell to the ground without the knowledge of the great heavenly Father. And then he told them also of the time that was coming some day when the animals should no longer live and devour one another, but the wolf and the lamb should feed together, and the lion eat straw like the bullock, and they turned in their Bibles to the eleventh and the sixty-fifth chapters of Isaiah and read the wonderful words for themselves.

And Fred did not forget the lesson, and when the time came for him to put it into use, he did so bravely and honorably.

Poor kitty was very sick, and mewled a good deal, till cook's patience well nigh gave way. Then, too, she was afraid of even the kind hands that ministered to her, so that it was very hard to take care of the wounded leg. But one day little four-year-old Daisy came down to the kitchen to play awhile, and spying poor kitty lying on her side in the basket, she sat down beside her and began patting and stroking her head and back with a loving hand, till the poor abused, friendless creature began to purr as happily as though she had never been a poor little tramp in her life. From that hour she made fast friends with Daisy, and when her leg got well, she followed the little girl about all day long, and was gentle and frolicsome that Monday declared her splendid fellow for the child.

But there came a day when Fred thanked his Heavenly Father from the bottom of his heart that he had learned to be kind to his little creature. For one day—how happened nobody knew—Daisy slipped away from busy mamma down to the kitchen, and when cook was "head over ears in work," as Fred said, the little girl followed the greaser's boy out of the half closed gate, and climbing the low basement steps toddled up the street as happy and care free as a lark. She scampered after her and entered hold of her soft white dress, to draw her back, but Daisy said:

"Poor pussy mustn't be scared. Mamma make pie for baby, pussy mustn't be scared, and her little feet pattered over into the park, under the green trees, Daisy played on the grass and played on the time, till at last she sank down on the soft grass, while pussy anxiously watch beside her.

Mrs. Raymond supposed her little girl was with Mary in the kitchen, and Mary never had a thought but that the child was in the nursery or with her mother, and so two full hours passed before they discovered their loss. Then, with pallid face, Mrs. Raymond hastened to the police station to sound the alarm of a lost child, while Fred, with burning heart and burning eyes, scoured the streets in every direction for runaway baby; but no trace of her could either of them find, and they waited and watched, and then went out to search again and again, only to return to their homes in greater fear and suspense.

The sun was just beginning to sink in the west when Fred, who was standing on the balcony out of the window, exclaimed with a ringing voice, "Mamma, mamma, here she is! Here's baby; the cat is bringing her home!"

There she was, toddling wearily up the street, aimlessly following pussy as she pranced and frolicked before her, or gently tugging at her dress, when the child loitered or turned out of the way.

Mrs. Raymond dashed down the stairs and into the street, and caught the tired baby to her breast, while Fred lifted the faithful cat in his arms and actually hugged her with joy.

HOME NEWS.

County Court next Tuesday.

Wheat harvest has commenced about here.

Mr. H. Doyle, Esq., and wife, were up at Frost Monday.

Miss Georgie Shearer, principal of the Hillsboro Training School, was in town last Wednesday.

The Lewisburg mail is coming in now at 11 a. m. instead of at night. Mr. Joe Landes is carrying it.

Capt. C. B. Swoeker, of Dunmore, will accept our many thanks for a box of nice cigars.

Mr. J. B. Poage, Sr., of Edray, is visiting his daughter Mrs. Anos Baylow in town, this week.

French Hall, Esq., of the firm of W. H. Hall and Son of Edray called to see us Monday.

We are authorized to announce a shooting match on Brown's creek, near Anson Curry's, Saturday July 1st.

The children's day exercises in the Methodist church last Sunday, were largely attended and very interesting.

A faded and discolored beard is what a man's fortune. It may be prevented by using Blacking hair's Dye for the Whiskers, a new, or failing remedy.

We are requested to announce that there will be a grand public picnic at Marlinton, on the picnic grounds near the mouth of Stony creek, the 4th of July. Everybody are cordially invited to attend.

S. B. Louny, Esq., Jr., of Moon, Va., is visiting his father, in town this week. He informed us that he had left a dog baby, three weeks old at home, making a total number of about six children he has, and one hearing him talk about it would think it was his first.

Huntersville is coming to the front, along with the rest of the booming towns, without a word. The lumber for three new buildings is being hauled; one dwelling house for Attorney L. M. McClintic, an addition to Huntersville Hotel and a new printing office for the POCAHONTAS TIMES.

No matter what may be the ills you bear from indigestion, a dose of Ayer's Cathartic Pills will ease you without question. Just try them once and be assured; they have much worse dyspeptic cured. You'll find them nice and amply worth the price.

Miss Jno. Hamilton, and Jno. Barnett, have returned from school at Concord. Our young friend Mr. Hamilton, graduated at the head of his class, and brought away with him two of the three gold medals given.

Until the blood is cleansed of impurities, it is useless to attempt the cure of any disease. Rheumatism, which is traceable to an acid in the blood, has been cured, in numerous cases, by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, external treatment being of no avail.

We hope when the County Court meets next Tuesday, they will make an allowance to, replace the rickety and disgraceful fence around the court house square with a new one. Also a new carpet for the court house would greatly add to its appearance, and the comfort of those who have business there.

It has been reported that the picnic in the Grove at Mr. Wm. Clerk's would be characterized by drunkenness and rowdyism. We can assure the public upon the word of Mr. D. B. McElwee and Mr. Wm. Clerk, that no drinking or drunkenness will be allowed upon the grounds, and that nothing but perfect gentlemanly conduct will be tolerated at this picnic. The public is cordially invited and may rest assured there will be perfect order.

Dunmore Delays.

Harvest has begun. The wheat crop is better than was anticipated, the grass crop is very good, and corn is looking fine.

Mr. Hugh McGlaughlin and wife, are visiting in Highland Co.

John A. Taylor has gone to Va., with the Harlow pat. chain.

Col. S. C. Pritchard has returned home from Tucker county.

Mr. J. F. Patterson, spent Monday in our town.

The Farmers Alliance will meet at Dunmore, on Saturday, July 12th. Several persons from here will attend the picnic on Knapp's creek.

The following are the counties in this State that have only one Clerk for the Circuit and County Courts: Callahan, Clay, Grant, Harlan, Mineral, Monroe, McDowell, and Wayne.

Mr. H. M. Moore, has returned from Clifton Forge.

Geo. W. Kesler and Miss Lizzie Galford were married Sunday at Green Bank.

TRAVELER.

BRIDGE LETTING.

Sealed bids will be received until 12 M., July 8th 1890, for the following work, for the bridge over Knapp's Creek, near Huntersville, W. Va.

Two abutments, one on each side of Creek. To be 21 feet by 7 feet at base and 18 feet by 3 feet at top, about 10 feet high built of regular cut stone on bed, sides and ends, with chowfered joints at a depth of 12 inches in 4 feet on front and rear walls and a declension of 6 inches in 8 feet on ends, walls to be circular, joints all well broken. Layers on corners, to be not less than 15 inches nor more than 24 inches high, and not less than 2 feet broad; all stone in outside wall to be not less than 2 feet long, except to complete a layer and then the shorter stones to be used in rear walls and joints well broken. The first layer of base to be carefully bedded down on the slate foundation all laid in cement up to 2 feet above high water mark, above this in lime and sand.

The Wing Walls to be laid well below the frost line, extend back 25 feet from abutment, and be laid up with large stone at a declension of 12 inches in 8 feet, well built with uncut stone, without mortar, wall to be at least two feet thick, and of sufficient height. Either two or four wing walls will be built as the County Court may hereafter elect. Also for moving the bridge from its present location, and placing it on the abutments aforesaid, when they are completed, with the following additional work: The roof of said bridge to be painted, and the cords of said bridge over the joints are to be braced by an additional piece of timber secured by four bolts (1 inch) at each joint; and all parts of the bridge must be sound and not split or damaged in any way, when rebuilt. The land on which said bridge is to be located has been condemned and the work will be proceeded with at once after the contract is let. The Court reserves the right to reject any and all bids, and will require bond from the contractor to whom the work is let for the faithful performance of his contract.

EAMES' LEGACY.

Charles Eames stepped into the office of his friend Bowles, editor of the Glenville Courant.

"How are you, Eames?" asked the editor.

"I ought to feel happy, I suppose," said the young man, a little ruefully, "for I've just received a notice of a legacy."

"Indeed, I congratulate you."

"Wait till you hear what it is."

"Well, what is it?"

"My Aunt Martha has just died, leaving fifty thousand dollars."

"To you? I congratulate you heartily."

"No, she leaves it to a public institution. She leaves me only her silver watch, which she has carried for forty years."

"How is that?"

"She didn't approve of my becoming an artist. She wished me to be a merchant. If I had consulted her wishes, I should, doubtless, have been her sole heir. This small legacy is meant more as an aggravation than any thing else."

"But you can make your own way."

"I can earn a scanty living at present. I hope to do better by and by. But you know my admiration for Mary Brooks. If I had been Aunt Martha's sole heir, I could have gained her father's consent to our marriage. Now it is hopeless."

"I am not so sure of that. This legacy may help you."

"An old watch? You are joking."

"Not if you will strictly observe my directions."

"What are they?"

"Simply this: Agree for one calendar month not to mention or convey the least idea of the nature of your aunt's bequest. I will manage the rest."

"I don't at all know what you mean, Bowles," said the young artist; "but I am in your hands."

"That is all I wish. Now remember to express surprise at nothing; but let matters take their course."

"Very well."

In the next issue of the Glenville Courant the young artist was surprised to read the following paragraph:

"We are gratified to record a piece of good luck which has just befallen our esteemed fellow-citizen the promising young artist, Charles Eames. By the will of an aunt recently deceased, he comes into possession of a piece of property which has been in the family for many years. Miss Eames is reported to have left fifty thousand dollars."

"Really," thought the young man, "I could hardly suppose from this paragraph that I had inherited my aunt's entire property."

He put on his hat and walked down the street. He met several friends, but none of them seemed to know anything of the matter.

He went home and found a letter from his father, who was now in the city. The letter was dated the day before.

"I have just received a notice of a legacy," said the young man to his father.

"What kind of a legacy?" asked his father.

"A silver watch, which she has carried for forty years."

"That is all?" asked his father.

his entire stock."

"But Mr. Brooks—"

"I know what you would say. It may go down—but it won't. I have advised that a speedy rise is almost certain. Buy him out, and you'll make a handsome thing of it."

"But how shall I find the money?"

"Of course you haven't received your legacy. I know there are delays. No trouble about that. Give your note on ninety days, and I'll indorse it. You'll sell out before that time at a handsome advance."

"I will place myself in your hands, Mr. Brooks, but you must indorse the business."

"Certainly; I shall only want your signature when the documents are made out. By the way, come around and dine with us, or have you another engagement?"

Another engagement? Had Eames fifty engagements he would have broken them all for the privilege of meeting Mary Brooks. This was the first time he had been invited to the capitalist's table. The fact is, until this morning, Mr. Brooks had scarcely noticed him more than a cool nod on meeting; but had changed, or appeared to, and his behavior altered with it. Such is the way of the world!

It was a very pleasant dinner. The young artist remained after wards.

"I have an engagement, Mr. Eames," said Mr. Brooks, "a meeting of the bank directors; but you mustn't go away. Mary will entertain you."

The young man did not go away and apparently was satisfied by the entertainment he received. He blessed his aunt for her legacy, if only it had procured him this afternoon's interview with the young lady he had admired. But it gained him more. Every four days he received a similar invitation. He could not fail to see that Ezekiel Brooks looked with evident complacency on the good understanding between his daughter and himself.

"What will he say?" thought the young man, "when he finds out what sort of a legacy I have received from my aunt?"

Occasionally, too, he felt nervous about his hasty assent to the proposition to buy four hundred shares of railroad stock at fifty-six, when he hadn't fifty dollars ahead. He reckoned up one day what his purchase would amount to, and his breath was almost taken away when he found it amounted to twenty-eight thousand dollars! Still, it had been in a manner forced upon him. He asked no questions, but every now and then the old gentleman said: "All going well? Stock advancing rapidly."

With that he was content. Indeed, he was so carried away by love of Mary Brooks that he gave little thought to any other subject.

One day Mr. Brooks came up, and found Eames sitting at his desk, looking very thoughtful.

"What is the matter?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

Charles Eames read this letter three times before he could realize its meaning. Could it be that with out investing a cent he had made over twenty thousand dollars? It must be a dream, he thought.

But when he called at the old gentleman's office, he found it was really true.

"Mr. Eames, how about this money? Shall I re-invest it for you?"

"Thank you sir. I wish you would. I should like a little in hand, however."

"Certainly. Will that answer?" and the old gentleman wrote a check for five hundred dollars and placed it in the young man's hand.

It was more money than he had ever before possessed at one time. This was convincing proof of the reality of his good fortune.

The next day he went to the city and ordered a handsome suit of clothes at a fashionable tailor's. The fact was his old coat was getting threadbare, and his overcoat decidedly seedy. While he was about it he bought a new coat and boots, as well as other needed articles, and still returned with money enough in his pocket to make him feel rich. He changed his boarding house, engaged a handsome room at a much nicer boarding-house.

"It seems to me you are dashing out, Eames," said his friend, the editor. "You know I've had a legacy," said Eames, laughing.

"I begin to think you have," said the editor.

When Eames appeared on the street in his new suit it was a confirmation of the news of his inheritance. His removal to fashionable boarding-house was additional confirmation. It was wonderful how he rose in the estimation of people who had before looked upon him as a shiftless artist.

All at once it occurred to him: "Why shouldn't I propose for Mary Brooks? With twenty thousand dollars I could certainly support her comfortably. There was a very pretty cottage and tasteful grounds for sale at five thousand dollars. This would make a charming home."

One morning with considerable trepidation, young Eames broached the subject to Mr. Brooks.

"No one I would like better for a son-in-law, if Mary is willing," was the prompt answer.

Mary was willing, and as there seemed no good reason for waiting, the marriage took place within a few weeks.

"Charles," said his father-in-law after the young people returned from their wedding journey, "it is time for me to render you out of your money affairs. I have been lucky in my investment. I have thirty-one thousand dollars to your credit."

"Thank you, father-in-law," said Eames, "I can lay my hands on it."

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

"What about it?" asked Mr. Brooks.

"I have been thinking of the legacy," said Eames.

—The evils resulting from habitual costiveness are many and serious; but the use of harsh, drastic purgative aperient, superior to all others, especially for family use.
—Presiding Elder, J. W. Lambert, of the W. Va. Conference, M. E. Church South, Clarksville district, has been in Hantersville, since Sunday evening. He will favor us with a sermon in the Methodist church tonight (Wednesday) at 8 o'clock. No doubt he will draw a large audience.
—The building on the corner of Church and Bridge Sts., belonging to Mr. J. T. Hogsett, of Mill Point, now occupied by J. C. Thompson's shoe shop and David Anderson, as a dwelling house, caught fire last Sunday evening and came very near burning up, but for the prompt tearing away of part of the roof.

—The Boncort Machine and Foundry Co. is at work on a large number of their improved corn mills. We advise our friends to write them for prices and if they have any machine or Foundry work, ask quotations before going elsewhere, as they are working a large force of hands.
—Thousands have been relieved of indigestion and loss of appetite by a single bottle of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. The use of this medicine, by giving tone and strength to the assimilative organs, has made innumerable cures of chronic dyspepsia. Price $1. Worth $5 a bottle.

—The Webster County Executive Committee conceded that the joint convention of the two Counties should be held at Hantersville, but with the time changed from the first Saturday in August to a later day. So far the question of time is left open, notice will be given when decided.

—In last week's issue there was a notice announcing that D. S. Stylenstrick, a series of sermons about the 1st of August, who are authorized by the church, carried over until next night, before the 4th of August, and the Sunday morning following at 11 o'clock, also the evening at 4 o'clock at M. E. Church at Elk.

—In this week's issue of THE TIMES, will be found the announcement of Mr. J. H. Patterson, of Green Bank, for Clerk of the Circuit Court. Mr. Patterson, has been a resident of our county for a number of years, and is highly esteemed by all who know him, and if elected, it is safe to predict, will make a good, accommodating and obliging Clerk.

If you have a few inches of space we would like to tell the patrons of your paper about the workings of the F. A. and J. N. at this place.
Our Pleasant View union, met Saturday, 14th at 2 p. m., and had a 4 hours session, during which we transacted some business that may be of interest to the brotherhood.
We formed a joint stock company called the The Danmore Alliance Mercantile Association.
Its object is to run a store at Danmore, adding only such per cent to the first cost of the goods as may be necessary to pay a given per cent on the money invested and the expenses of running the store.
We propose to issue 800 or 1000 shares at $5.00 a share and stock will be on the market directly after our next meeting which will be the first Saturday in August.
W. H. Cuckley, Esq., was elected business agent for our Alliance.

Buena Vista's Plack.
A dispatch from Buena Vista says that the Buena Vista Company have already made arrangement to erect a new hotel on site of the recently burned building. Mr. Pettyjohn, of Lynchburg, is to be the contractor. The new building will be of brick and larger than the former one, and that in the meantime the company, is arranging to open the Colonial Hotel, containing forty-eight rooms, which will be completed in ten days. Visitors are being accommodated by the numerous boarding houses in the town, and no one need stay away for fear of not being taken care of.
More lots were sold on the day following the fire than on any day for two weeks previously, three of them averaging $120 a front foot in price. So far from being discouraged the people of the town have only been stimulated to greater activity by their first misfortune.—Valley Virginian.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., July 14.
Melville Rader, a young married man of about 30 years, was found dead last Friday in the garden of a man by the name of Buchanan, who lives in Webster county, at the mouth of Sugar creek, on the back fork of Elk river. He had a bullet wound in his left breast near the heart, and was struck by a trail of blood from Buchanan's house into the garden, where he was found after, being dead, evidently about three hours. Although the facts connected with his death are known, still there are circumstances which point strongly to a party named Bill Coe. Coe and Buchanan had married sisters, but Coe and his wife had not lived happily and Mrs. Coe left her husband to live with Buchanan. Rader, who is a married man is said to have conceived a strong affection for Mrs. Coe and to have avowed his intention of taking her from her sister unto himself. Be this as it may, he went on the fatal Friday to the house of Buchanan, where he found the two women. Later Coe came to the house and after remaining awhile was seen to leave the place in company with the two women. There was no one else about the place, so far as known, except Rader, whose body was found a few days later by some huntermen, who were working in the neighborhood. The man who is said to have been a party to the crime is now being sought by the authorities.

Advice to Mothers.
Mrs. Winkler's SOOTHING SYRUP should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferer from all kinds of nervousness, and the little cherub awakes bright as a button. It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

TO WEAK MEN
Suffering from the effects of youthful errors, early decay, wasting weakness, neuralgia, etc., I will send a valuable treatise (valued) containing full particulars for home cure, FREE of charge. A splendid medical work, should be read by every man who is nervous and debilitated. Address, Prof. F. C. FOWLER, Medico, Conn.

Dry Goods, etc., Bishopville, Md.
"I have been using Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years, and believe that it has caused my hair to remain in its natural color, and requiring but a small quantity to render the hair as soft and glossy as the hair of a young man. It is the best hair dressing I have ever used, and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past four or five years and find it a most satisfactory dressing for the hair."
—J. D. Williams, Florist, Dallas, Texas.
It has apparently come to stay. The Vigor is evidently a great aid to nature. Thick and Strong.

It is stated that the railroad companies of the country have submitted to date $665,000 to the stock of the World's Fair.

A diver who was working at the foundation of a railroad bridge near Boise City, Idaho, gave a signal to be hoisted quickly. When he got to the surface he held fast a 5 pound salmon that he had caught by the gills.

Walter Pariah, aged twenty-five, of Milton, went into the hardware store of A. Wins, at Oatleburg, and asked to see a revolver. One was handed to him, when he placed it to his head and blew his brains out.

The National Bridge property in Virginia has been sold to a Massachusetts and Virginia syndicate for $100,000. It was purchased from J. C. Parsons and Hon. James G. Blaine, who have owned it for a number of years.

The census returns from Wheeling, W. Va., and vicinity are all in. The population of the city proper is 37,595. Including the suburbs, which are virtually a part of the town, and are included in what is known as "Industrial Wheeling," the increase since 1880 has been about 50 per cent.

The returns from Virginia's new assessment have been received from all the State except twelve counties and the cities of Richmond and Norfolk. The total increase in the counties and cities reported is about $15,000,000, and it is believed that the remaining counties will show a considerable gain.

Two young men named Oscar Hoffman and James Allen were drowned at the mouth of Wolfcreek, near Huntersville. They were in bathing when the boat was upset. Oscar was about 18 years old and James was about 16.

A WELL OF HONEY.—A successful boring for honey has been made in North Tennessee. For many years swarms of bees have been noticed by boatmen at Fox Bluff, on the Cumberland river, near Franklin, Ky. The bluff is 170 feet high, and the river's channel runs directly under it. The bees have been observed about a big fissure near the center of the bluff, and the opening could not be reached from above or below without great danger of being stung to death. As the bees had never been robbed it was thought a large amount of honey was stored in the cliff. Recently a well-borer named Starks visited the bluff and was at once impressed with the idea that he could reach the wonderful honey storehouse with his drill. After some coaxing he persuaded a number of farmers to undergo the expense, and a three inch hole was bored from the top of the bluff. At a depth of 85 feet the drill struck the honey. According to a despatch, "barrels and tubs by the score were filled and carried off to neighboring farms, and the syndicate has sent to Louisville for more receptacles."

WASHINGTON LETTER.
(From our regular correspondent.)
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 25.—The Southern Senators deprecate boycotting, but decline to talk about it; some of them, for instance Gorman of Maryland and Vance of North Carolina, see nothing in it but the silly vaporings of super-heated highly excited imaginations. Senator Vance said: "I am a Christian, and therefore I do not swear; but if I were a profane man, I should call it the d—st nonsense. We ought to oppose the Force bill by every constitutional and legal means within our power. If it be passed in spite of us, we should do as the town clerk of Ephesus did, and counsel our people to do nothing rash."

Senator Gorman was equally free in expression. The Maryland Senator is very blunt, and although that manner is liable to offend, it usually carries with it the sincerity of the speaker. He said: "Such utterances are sensible in the extreme. No person much in Washington is in sympathy with such a plan, or would encourage it for a moment. The effect of the passage of such a measure as the Lodge bill would be bad in both sections. It is having its effect already, as a result of the mere agitation of the question."

The bill that several Senators have introduced, which would give the government the right to take charge of elections in cases of emergency, can, by the U. S. Statutes and constitution be only this: Sec. 4, Chapter 1: When the State shall refuse or neglect to provide for the election of U. S. Senators and representatives the national legislature may appoint the representatives of the state. But the times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof.

right to take charge of federal elections, in cases of emergency, can, by the U. S. Statutes and constitution be only this: Sec. 4, Chapter 1: When the State shall refuse or neglect to provide for the election of U. S. Senators and representatives the national legislature may appoint the representatives of the state. But the times, places and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof.

It is a notorious fact that a number of republican senators are disgusted with the Lodge bill, and would say so, but for the trouble such frankness brings. No sooner does a senator say that he deprecates such legislation than he is hondded by a lot of partisans into denying, or modifying, his published expressions. It has become as much as a republican senator's life is worth, to think aloud, contrary to the republican journals in this matter.

Every senator who is reported as being lukewarm is immediately seen; and if he does not authorize a contradiction of any little expression that escaped him, it is contradicted anyhow. It is not strange that under the circumstances senators should, for the sake of peace, keep their views to themselves.

They will not, however, be regulated or subjugated, if ever the time comes, to jump upon the neck of the Lodge bill and choke the life out of it.

Mr. Harrison must have learned something recently which caused him to think his chances of being re-nominated are improving; he has authorized a statement to be made to the effect that his wife did not accept the cottage at Cape May Point, because he refused to allow her to do it; and that he paid for it with $10,000 of his own money. The effect of this statement would have been greater if it had been made sooner.

The House in obedience to the dictation of Speaker Reed, has passed the Original Package bill, and the National Bankruptcy bill.

The Behring Sea correspondence has been sent to Congress, and the fact is apparent that Mr. Blaine has done nothing but maintain the claims of Mr. Cleveland's administration.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

During the coming year the United States will expend $167,000,000 for pension purposes. This exceeds the total amount that Great Britain annually pays out for the support of her army and navy, and is by far the largest sum that any government has ever granted for the relief of its disabled soldiers.

ROAD LETTING.

Pursuant to authority vested in me by virtue of an order of the County Court of Pocahontas County, West Virginia entered on 11th day of July, 1890, I, as Commissioner, appointed for the purpose, will receive sealed bids until 12 o'clock in. on Thursday, July 31st, 1890, from contractors for the following work, to be done under the supervision and direction of the undersigned Commissioner, to-wit: To build and put in good condition for travel the new location of that part of the Huntersville and Dunmore road, beginning at the gate in the alley near Wagner's Hotel upon the recent location. Through the Grave Yard lot, the road-bed to be at least 12 feet wide and the grade at no point above 5 degrees from the top to the foot of the hill with road at least Five inches high on the outside, or side from the bank. Through the land of William Curry the road to be 20 feet from cut to cut, and to be 2 feet above the mean level and at least 16 inches higher in the middle than at each side, with gradual slope from center to the ditches, which are to be 14 inches below the mean level, the road-way being required 16 feet wide. The same conditions will govern through the lands of Elizabeth McGloughlin and John J. Beard. All marshy and low places must be well stoned or graveled, and all stone necessary to raise the center of said road placed thereon. A sufficient culvert will be required across the branch in the bottom and the board on Brown's creek must be properly opened and banks graded.

Bond will be required of the Contractor in double the amount of the contract price, to comply with his agreement and to complete the work on or before September 20th 1890.

The work will be paid for by the County Court when completed and accepted.

Huntersville, W. Va.

July 31, 1890.

To The Memory of Rev. J. E. Moore. Died at Mill Point.

We publish the following by request. Oh father, dear, what power was that which claimed thy feeble breath? What made thy frame so cold, thy pulse so still? A whisper answers "Death."

Yes, thou art dead; thy sturdy form now sleeps beneath the sod; An angel from the throne came down to wait thy spirit back to God.

'Twas in the March of '90, on the twenty-second day, Just as the sun was kissing noon his spirit fled away.

The frosts of age were thickening fast, his hair was hoary white, When unto him the Master saith, "Receive thy sparkling crown of light."

And tho' we knew that all was well, that Jordan's waves were still, Yet, oft our grief in tears are shed for him who rests upon the hill. Oh, what a weight of sorrow came to fill our hearts with gloom, As we gently laid him down to rest within the silent tomb.

Ah, why should I now care to long-er live? Joy's dearest games are gone. No more of love and life have fled, yet we must still live on.

Yes, we must drink life's bitter cup, the "wormwood and the gall;" Be with our cheerless lot content till Death hath summoned all.

Glad up thine armor, O, my stricken soul; stretch forth thy quickened power.

Even yet thy hand may pluck from joys complete a diadem of flowers. For sympathetic words still come, like beams of light, to cheer, And twine their tendrils round the heart and shed there sweetest there.

When at last our names are called we'll lay life's armor by, Like other mortal relics of the past, and dwell with Christ on high.

And when we've joined that heavenly choir, this solace sweet we'll sing: "O, grave where is thy victory? O, Death, where is thy sting?"

W. B. H. Moore.

FOUND HIM AT LAST.

We were sitting on the veranda of a hotel at Niagara Falls, when I noticed the man on my right looking sharply at the man on my left, says the New York Sun, and presently he got up in an excited way and walked about. After a bit he halted before the other man and asked:

"Isn't your name Graham?"

"Yes sir," was the prompt reply.

"Didn't you need to teach school at Hunter?"

"Yes, sir."

"In 1847?"

"Yes sir."

"Do you remember a boy named Godkin?"

"Very distinctly sir."

"Do you remember that he put a package of Bee ranchers under his coat and touched them off?"

"As if it happened only yesterday."

And now, you see, the man who was sitting next to me is the same man who was sitting next to me when I was a boy.

And now, you see, the man who was sitting next to me is the same man who was sitting next to me when I was a boy.

And now, you see, the man who was sitting next to me is the same man who was sitting next to me when I was a boy.

yet."

"You hear from him now. He stands before you! I am that boy!"

"Well?"

"Prepare to be licked! My time has come at last!"

He made a dive at the old pedagogue, but the latter evaded him, made a half turn and hit him on the jaw, and Godkin went over a chair in a heap. Then the whilom school teacher piled on to him and licked him until he cried "Enough!" and it didn't take him over three minutes to do it. Then he retired to get on another collar and replace some buttons, and I helped Godkin up and observed:

"You didn't wait long enough, I guess."

"Say! That's where I made a mistake!" he replied. "I see now that I ought to have held off until he got to be a 150 years old. He is all of 70 now, but he licked me right off the reel, and I'll never have the sand to stand up to him again. Here's twenty years of waiting for vengeance knocked into a cocked hat in three minutes."

Servant—"Two gentlemen at the door want to see you, ma'am. They didn't come together; just happened to arrive at the same time."

Mistress—"How do they behave?"

"One of 'em is very polite, and begs the honor of a few minutes' conversation."

"I don't want to see him; he's doubtless got something to sell."

"The other is stiff as a ramrod, and don't waste no words."

"He must have a bill. Tell them both I'm not at home."

Briggs—"I did not see you at church last Sunday." Briggs—"No; I didn't get in until you had gone to sleep."

"Always pay cash as you go. That's my principle," said Seaside. "Hump! That accounts for your slowness, I presume," remarked a friend.

Professor—"What is the difference between knowledge and conceit?" Student—"Knowledge is what we ourselves know; conceit is what the other fellows think they know."

Boy (at grindstone) Pap, have you read anything about the labor movement that they are agitating?

Old Man—Well, you git more labor movement in yer elbow and less in yer head. We'll git these axes done sooner.

Wife—My dear that horrid man next door has killed the dog.

Husband—Well, never mind, my dear; I'll get you another one some time.

Wife—But it wasn't my Fido that he killed; it was your hunting dog.

Husband (wildly)—Where's my gun?

I took Sick.

FLESH ON MY BONES

BEGIN, due to the presence of alkali in the blood, is most effectually cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Be sure you get Ayer's and no other, and take it till the poisonous acid is thoroughly expelled from the system. We challenge attention to this testimony:

"About two years ago, after suffering for nearly two years from rheumatic gout, being able to walk only with great difficulty, and having tried various remedies, including mineral waters, without relief, I saw by an advertisement in a Chicago paper that a man had been relieved of this distressing complaint, after long suffering, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I then decided to make a trial of this medicine, and took it regularly for eight months, and am pleased to state that it has effected a complete cure. I have since had no return of the disease."—Mrs. R. L. Irving, 112 West 122nd St., New York.

"One year ago I was taken ill with inflammation of the stomach, being confined to my house six months. I came out of the sickness very much debilitated, with no appetite, and my system disordered in every way. I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla and began to improve at once, gaining in strength and soon recovering my usual health. I cannot say too much in praise of this well-known medicine."—Mrs. L. A. Stark, Nashua, N. H.

Bob McGee's Scalp.

Bob McGee, of Easton, Kan., is but thirty-nine years old, yet he has gone twenty-six years without a scalp, with a bullet in his ribs and the scars of several awful wounds by Indian arrows. It adds not a little to the interest of his case to learn that he was shot and scalped by the once noted Little Turtle, and the ball now lodged between two of his ribs was put there by Little Turtle, with the identical pistol which President Lincoln had not long before presented to the "noble red man."

Senator Plumb of Kansas, has introduced a bill in Congress to pay McGee $5,000 out of the general or Indian fund and presents in support of it abundant evidence to prove the following facts: In 1864 Robert McGee, thirteen years old, was left an orphan and without means, but being quite tall for his age he tried to enlist at Fort Leavenworth. He was rejected but employed as a teamster, and started with a small train to Fort Union, N. M. On the 11th of July, near where the city of Great Bend now stands, Little Turtle's band of Sioux warriors attacked the train. The whites fought long and well, but were overpowered, and every one killed except young McGee.

It seems that the Indians at first intended to spare him for some reason, but after compelling him to witness the torture of others not quite dead they decided to kill him also. The chief shot him with the elegant pistol he carried as a souvenir, and three spears were run into his back as he lay upon the ground. Little Turtle then tore off his scalp and struck him twice with a tomahawk, fracturing the skull at each blow. The savage departed, and in a few hours a party of soldiers arrived on their way to Fort Lathell. Sorrowfully they gathered the corpses for burial but perceiving signs of life in McGee they bound up his wounds and took him to the fort.

The surgeons exhausted their skill upon him; the struggle was long and terrible, but he lived—as remarkable a recovery as any related in history. The details were laid before President Lincoln, who sent for the boy, and was deeply affected by his account. The Western generals were directed to favor him in employment. Many years after McGee's uncle acquired wealth in the West and tried to recover the scalp from Little Turtle, but unsuccessfully. McGee is now apparently in robust health, but of course terribly disfigured.

The Hour Hand.

"Come, come, you won't get around this week if you don't hurry up!" said the Minute Hand to the Hour Hand, and he winked at figure One as he passed along. "Here come old Hour Hand," he said to figure Two. "Look out, he doesn't run over you."

round putting them up to poke fun at his slow friend. The figures laughed and called out to one another that the Minute Hand was too smart a chap for the Hour Hand to havel with. The Pendulum down below knew what was going on, and laughed softly as it rocked to and fro. Even the pale face of the clock seemed about to break out into a smile at the general hilarity.

Meanwhile the poor Hour Hand crept laboriously on.

"Ah, Shorty!" cried the Minute Hand close behind him, "been taking a nap? Come, I'll bet I can go around the ring twelve times to your once; look out now! I'll soon pass you."

The little bell struck sharply, "one, two!"

"Hello, he's got as far as Two!" The figures said, and they all laughed loudly.

"Oh, dear, dear!" sighed the Hand, "I can't go any faster to save my life. Now I wish I was as smart as the Minute Hand. I'm the butt of all his jokes, and the others laugh at me, too. I haven't a friend on the face of the clock. I can't endure it any longer. I won't go on. I'll just stop right here."

"Where's our moderate friend?" asked the figure of the Minute Hand an hour or two later.

"O, he stopped back there," was the answer. "I started to race with me, but I guess he got out of wind."

After a while the owner of the clock came into a room. "Hello!" said he "clock stopped? No," he continued, "but might as well be for all the good it do without the Hour Hand." Then he gently touched the Hour Hand, seized the Minute Hand and shoved him round and round the circle, waited to see that they were going properly and went away.

"How!" exclaimed the Minute Hand, dizzy and breathless: "How could you do that?" and he was mightily crestfallen because the figures had seen him so roughly used. But the Hour Hand traveled on with a happy face and the figures looked upon him with great respect.

The moral of this tale is that the smartest people are not always the most useful.

They Parted Forever.

"See that young lady," queried a young man on a ferryboat yestern day of his companion.

"Yes."

"I was engaged to her once."

"You don't say?"

"See that poodle dog?"

"Yes."

"Well, he broke our engagement."

"No! What's the story?"

"It was on this very boat. We had come down for an evening ride. We sat right over there, and after a bit I got up to get her a drink of water. While I was gone her poodle got into my chair, and when I returned I sat down upon him."

"But if the girl really and truly loved you—"

"Oh, she did that."

"But—"

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 1.—Senator Hoar's a remarkable product even for the republican party. He has done many absurd things in his life, but the climax was reached when his advocacy of the Federal Election bill before the republican caucus drove the following language, which should drive him from public life for the rest of his natural life: "While I favor passing the tariff bill, sooner than that this Congress could not pass the Federal Election bill, I would prefer to see ever manufacturing establishment in Massachusetts burned to ash and the people of that State required to labor in callings in which they could not make more than 50 cents per day and that they be required to live on cod-fish." It is a great pity that this ranting demagogue could not be required to live on cod-fish and 50 cents per day.

The Senate will meet at 10 o'clock daily for consideration of the tariff bill.

The Lodge still lies in a state of coma, in care of the committee on Privileges and Elections.

The Rehing Searles occupy a great deal of the attention of the House and Senate at present. Whether or not legislation will be enacted on the subject, this session, cannot be determined.

Senator Sherman has introduced a bill to incorporate the American National Association of the Red Cross, with Clara Barton, George Kauman, J. B. Hubbard, M. I. and others as its incorporators. After the passage of the bill, it will be unlawful for any other association to display the symbol of the Red Cross, in this country.

Senator Evans has introduced a bill for the benefit of Dr. Mary Walker. It calls for $10,000. It is considered as a reimbursement to her for her services and sufferings as an assistant physician during the war. This bill for her relief has been reported favorably by the House committee on military affairs four times before.

The tariff question will not probably be settled for a month yet, Senator Morrill, of Vermont, is the prominent republican champion in the Senate, on this subject. But all his arguments seem to be delivered more for the purpose of displaying his talents than convincing any one of the sincerity of his remarks.

The Sundry civil bill is also occupying the attention of the Senate. Mr. Cummings has just finished a severe attack on the Geological Survey. It was in respect to the distribution of the Great American Desert. He ridiculed the work of the bureau in the preparation of geological maps. These maps included a little about the desert. A Jersey merchant failed, and bankrupt. "What does a man in my condition want of a map of California?" Should not the United States with a deficiency of $100,000,000, starting it in the face exclaim with the Jerseyman "Great Heavens! What do I want of a geological map, costing more than $15,000,000?"

There is a lot of fresh talk about Blaine's resigning, and the fact that Mr. Harrison has sent Mr. Blaine word to meet him at Cape May Point whither he has gone has caused many people to think that there is something in it. There is certainly the biggest kind of a family row among the republican leaders, and it would not be surprising if it resulted in somebody's resignation.

A family figure in Washington hotel lobbies will be removed when "Judge" W. G. Riley "an old Virginia gentleman, by gad, sir" is confirmed by the Senate as Consul to some place in Venezuela, to which he has been nominated. He is the original of the familiar "Judge" in the cartoon of the "Judge and the Major" and has always professed to be an authority on the duelling code. He was never known to refuse a drink, nor was he ever seen intoxicated, and it is thought that the administration made a mistake in not sending him to Mexico. If any American can stand "Paeque" he is the man.

On motion of J. B. Apperson the same delegates were appointed to the Senatorial convention, and were instructed to cast their votes for Capt. Wm. L. McNeel for State Senator.

On motion, the same delegates were appointed to attend the State convention, and were instructed to cast their votes for D. B. Lucas for Supreme Court Judge.

On motion, Withrow McClintic, Philip Kramer, Wm. M. Sharp, Jacob S. Moore and John W. Mulcomb, were appointed delegates to the Delegate District Convention to be held at Huntersville on the day of August, 1890.

On motion the Chairman and Secretary were added to each of the foregoing committees.

On motion, the proceedings of this meeting were ordered to be published in the POCAHONTAS TIMES and the Greenbrier Independent.

LEVI GAY, Ch'n,
CHAS. COOK, Sec'y.

Pursuant to a call of the County Executive Committee, the Democratic voters of Green Bank district assembled at Green Bank, on the 26th inst.

G. W. Siple called the house to order and explained the object of the meeting.

On motion, H. A. Yeager was elected chairman and J. P. Wooddell, secretary.

G. W. Siple moved that the delegates to the several conventions be selected by ballot, and that each delegate be voted for separately which was unanimously adopted.

The meeting then proceeded to the election of the following delegates to the several conventions.

District Delegate convention—J. W. Riley, J. C. Arbogast and J. C. Lakin. Alternates—J. L. Hudson, W. H. Collins and Hugh McLaughlin.

Senatorial convention—Dr. C. L. Austin, C. O. Arbogast and C. A. Lightner. Alternates—J. A. Taylor, J. W. Riley and W. W. Arbogast.

Resolutions.

The following are the resolution of the teachers at the Teachers' Institute held at this place week last:

Resolved. That it is the opinion of this Institute that no change of text books of the Free School of the State, should be made at the next session of the Legislature.

Resolved. That the teachers of Pocahontas county, respectfully request the next Legislature to make the minimum salary of grade No. 1 $30.00 instead of $25.00 and to raise the minimum salary of the other grades in the same ratio, new branches having been added to the Free School curriculum and the standard of education having been elevated sufficiently to demand the increase.

Resolved. That it is the opinion of this Institute that teachers who have held four years certificates and who have taught on the same during that time, should be allowed by law immediately upon the expiration of said certificate to enter the examination for the purpose of receiving another four years certificate.

Resolved. That our thanks are due and are tendered Prof. G. S. Laidly for the pleasant and efficient manner in which he has conducted the Institute.

Resolved. That the thanks of the Institute are tendered to M. G. Mathews, Co. Supt. for his supervision during the time.

Resolved. That the thanks of this Institute are extended to Atty C. F. Moore, Rev. L. F. Snapp and others for the valuable information imparted on several topics discussed by the Institute.

Resolved. That we appreciate the kindness of the owners of the organ in allowing us its use during the Institute.

Resolved. That our Co. Supt. is hereby requested to furnish copies to our Delegate to the next Legislature, to the State Senator from this Senatorial district and to the State Supt. of Free Schools.

Resolved. That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the Pocahontas TIMES, with the request that they be published.

Respectfully submitted.

CHINESE MEDICAL PRACTICE.

—In China a physician attends only to the inner man, and the surgeon to the outer. And the Chicago Tribune tells this story to show how strictly the code of medical ethics is observed in that country: "An English tourist was riding a bicycle in Hong Kong when he fell from his bicycle with such violence that one of the iron spokes was run into his shoulder, where it broke off and stuck fast. The man was removed to a house, and a surgeon summoned. The surgeon first demanded his fee. After pocketing his money he broke off the protruding point of the spoke, leaving the other fragment imbedded in the sufferer's body. He then went away. The tourist was in intense agony, but the surgeon would not help him. Medical etiquette forbade. "The cause is for the physician," he said, "as the wire is inside the body."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven it to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address, F. J. The Snake Charmer.

Lulu La Toska is the name of the snake charmer who handles the reptiles at Barnum's show. She is a Russian by birth, and has had control over snakes from her babyhood.

"How do you account for your power over snakes?" was asked by a Chicago Globe reporter at the close of a performance in which she had hung 450 pounds of live coils around her neck and body.

"It is a charm I have possessed since my birth. I was born to govern them, and the mark of a snake encircles me. Since two years old I have played with them. They have bitten me twice, but I am still alive, as you see."

"Where do you get the snakes?"

"They come from India. I am going to get thirty new ones in a few days. I lost one of the old ones I had had for fourteen years, in St. Louis. The stage fell on him and crushed him to death. Another one tried to bite me, and struck her self. She was deadly poison and died. They cost lots of money, from $150 to $500, and it's a big misfortune to have one die."

"How often do they eat?"

"Every three weeks usually, but the mean one that bit itself to death had not fasted anything for a year and a half. Did you notice me tickle one of them under the chin? That's Karma. She likes it, and just lays her head back to enjoy it. She eats two chickens every week now. They are cross and don't eat when they are blind, which they are every six weeks. Then I have to touch them lightly so they will know when I am coming. If they turn their heads to look at me I pick them up, but if they stretch their heads away I let them alone, for they are ugly. We have to humor them like children."

"Is their bite poisonous?" asked the reporter.

"Yes; I handle an Indian bwarpythod, one of the most poisonous snakes to the world. I also play with the black mitter without any trouble."

It had 4,784,637 inhabitants at the last census. It has now over 5,000,000.

Of its adult population, according to census returns, more than one third were born in the country. A birth takes place on an average every three minutes.

A death takes place on an average of every five minutes.

About 247 persons every day are added to its population, or 1,229 every week.

Last year 86 miles 384 yards of houses were added to its streets.

It contains upwards of a million of habitual neglectors of public worship.

It has 60 miles of shops open every Sunday.

It has a foreign population of the head of the family, "I believe our Johnny is turning over a new leaf and is going to be a better boy."

He asked me a little while ago if he could take the family Bible up to his room for an hour or two."

About the same time a boy of Johnny's size was seen to enter a cigarstore in the vicinity open a big book and lay it on the counter.

"Do you see this entry?" he demanded, addressing the proprietor in thunder tones. "You said I wasn't sixteen. Look at this: 'John, born May 5, 1874.' Glumme five boxes of cigarettes, and be quick about it. Blame yer gizzard!"

Constipation.

If not remedied in season, is liable to become habitual and chronic. Drastic purgatives, by weakening the bowels, counteract, rather than cure, the evil. Ayer's Pills, being mild, effective, and strengthening in their action, are generally recommended by the faculty as the best of aperients.

"Having been subject, for years, to constipation, without being able to find much relief, I at last tried Ayer's Pills. I found it both a duty and a pleasure to testify that I have derived great benefit from their use. For over two years past I have taken one of these pills every night before retiring. I would not willingly be without them."—G. W. Thompson, 26 East Main St., Carlisle, Pa.

"I have been taking Ayer's Pills and giving them to my family since 1857, and cheerfully recommend them to all in need of a safe and effectual cathartic."—Julius M. Briggs, Louisville, Ky.

"For eight years I was afflicted with constipation, which at last became so bad that the doctors could do no more for me. Then I began to take Ayer's Pills, and soon my bowels recovered their natural and regular action, so that now I am in excellent health."—S. L. Loughbridge, Bryan, Texas.

"Having used Ayer's Pills, with good results, I fully endorse them for the purpose for which they are recommended."—T. Conner, M. D., Centre Bridge, Pa.

Indigestion

It is not only a distressing complaint, of itself, but, by causing the blood to become depraved and the system enfeebled, is the parent of innumerable maladies. That Ayer's Sarsaparilla is the best cure for Indigestion, even when complicated with Liver Complaint, is proved by the following testimony from Mrs. Joseph Lake, of Brockway Centre, Mich.:

"Liver complaint and indigestion made my life a burden and came near ending my existence. For more than four years I suffered untold agony, was reduced almost to a skeleton, and hardly had strength to drag myself about. All kinds of food distressed me, and only the most delicate could be digested at all. Within the time mentioned several physicians treated me without giving relief. Nothing that I took seemed to do any permanent good until I commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which has produced wonderful results. Soon after commencing to take the Sarsaparilla I could see an improvement in my condition. My appetite began to return and with it came the ability to digest all the food taken, my strength improved each day, and after a few months of faithful attention to your directions, I found myself a well woman, able to attend to all household duties. The medicine has given me a new lease of life."
